Herbert N. Straus.
What Is Temperance.
A 30-Hour Week.
Swearing Both Ways.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE DEATH of Herbert N. Straus, youngest son of the late Isidor and Ida Straus, who were lost on the Titanic, is a severe blow to many friends, and to American philanthropic and business life.

Mr. Straus, a brilliant businessman, and a musician of unusual talent, did much to encourage musicians less fortunate than himself in worldly goods. He was only fifty-one years old, a man of kind, generous heart, who made many friends and lost none.

MRS. ELLA BOOLE, sincere head of the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the Illinois Anti-Saloon League, deplores beer, saying:

"Temperance is total abstinence from intoxicating liquors, and beer is intoxicating."

She invites the public to survey the effects of beer and to pass judgment.

For some years past the public has "surveyed the effects of prohibition," the crime wave, bootlegging, racketeering, kidnaping, et cetera, and has passed judgment.

Temperance is not "total abstinence." That is the temperance of the weak, unable to control themselves. Entire nations have lived temperately, without total abstinence.

NINETEEN STATES drank legal beer yesterday, others continued to drink bootleg beer, whisky, gin, and so on.

Crowds gathered at a brewery at 6 in the morning to celebrate the first beer delivery. The brewers wisely had refused to deliver beer at midnight, as they might have done, to avoid unseemly demonstrations and celebrations.

Of the crowd that gathered at 6 to cheer beer, some, perhaps, would not have got up so early to look for a job. Such is the nature of man.

WHEN BEER was coming back, its return certain, there was much discussion of the question "where and how will beer be sold?"

With beer's return you learn that it is to be sold EVERYWHERE and ANYHOW.

The drug store in former Gov. Alfred E. Smith's Empire State Building sold beer as early as 7 o'clock yesterday morning. It is sold by delicatessen shops, and shops of every conceivable kind. Perhaps the old-time, much-dreaded beer saloon will stay away because it would not be able to stand the competition.

THE SENATE votes for a working week with five days of work, six hours to the day, only thirty hours a week for work, and the week's other 138 hours for "do as you please."

That is, on the surface, an improvement on the old union labor cry "eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep, eight hours for what we will."

HOW THE thirty-hour week will work remains to be seen. Eventually, doubtless, when man's hardest work will be pushing a button and letting machines do everything else, the work day will be extremely short. But a sudden drop to thirty hours is, perhaps, premature.

Time will tell about that as about other things, in these days of "doing ANYTHING is better than doing nothing."

RUBY BATES and another woman accused seven Negroes of a crime that means death in Alabama where the charge was made, and the Negroes were all sentenced to death.

The Supreme Court of the United States gave them another trial, and Ruby Bates, having talked to the Rev. Mr. Fosdick in New York, now returns to Alabama and swears that her testimony, and that of a woman with her, was false.

She swears that she and the other woman agreed to accuse the Negroes in order that they might save themselves from going to jail for traveling from one state to another with white men.

The outcome of this trial, with one woman swearing against the Negroes, and another swearing in their favor, "after her conscience was aroused," is important and interesting.

CHANCELLOR HITTLER, German dictator, is proud of his "almost bloodless" revolution. Only 330 were slain, says he, in the "rebirth of the German empire." Forty thousand were wounded, and 100,000 suffered economic distress. Forty thousand are in prison, a few were shot "trying to escape."

Chancellor Hitler rules that if Christ returned to earth, he would lead Hitler's Nazis against all Communists. This belief will cost Germany real money. Russia, offended by Hitler's statement, has just given an order for 18,000 tons of steel to French plants in Loraine. French blast furnaces, closed for some time, have been reopened.

Chancellor Hitler may feel the need of some divinity to lead Nazis against the French blast furnaces.

IN ENGLAND the House of Lords is considering a bill to keep all Russian goods out of Britain, because Russia has locked up some English subjects. This may also be good news for French factories.

SHORTLY AFTER midnight yesterday somebody sent a wagonload of beer to the White House. Later President Roosevelt sent the beer to the Washington Press Club, perhaps in recognition of the fact that so many newspapers had been moaning, groaning and yelling for beer.

The beer would have been welcome in some hospital for soldiers, and the newspaper men could afford to buy beer.

Dancer Aids Fay in Love Suit

MRS. VALLEE CHARGES FRAMEUP

Papa Webb Promises 'Interesting Facts' At Proper Time

International News Service.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Garfield Leon, the man whose affections have become the subject of a suit involving Fay Webb Vallee, declared himself today an unmarried man—and nobody's fiance.

He is just "a school friend" of Fay's, he said, having grown up with her in Santa Monica, Cal., whence the wife of Rudy Vallee now is bound by train.

She carries with her a summons in the $100,000 suit brought by Kathleen Leon, who claims Garfield's affections were alienated by Fay.

SUMMONS SERVED

The summons was served at the last minute, as Mrs. Vallee quit this city and Rudy "forever."

Leon, who is an adagio dancer now appearing in a Brooklyn theater, said Kathleen never had been married to him. He declared:

"Why anyone should sue over my affections is a mystery. I went to school with Fay Webb in Santa Monica. We were just school friends. I was in Europe all of 1932, and just came back. I have seen Miss Webb in New York twice, by accident, since last January."

Fay's father, Police Chief Webb, who is with her on the train, said in Albany there was no possibility of a reconciliation between her and her crooner-husband.

'FRAMEUP' SAYS FAY

A little further from New York—in Buffalo, as a matter of fact—Fay Webb Vallee herself issued a statement. She called the suit brought by Kathleen Leon, a "frameup." She demanded:

"Look at me! Am I upset? Ha, ha, ha!"

Her father said:

"We'll bring out some interesting facts at the proper time. I've commuted across this country 28 times in two years. I'm sick of traveling and sicker of temperamental people, and I'm homesick and heartsick for California. They have real men out there."

Chief Webb was to have been the "peacemaker" between Ruddy and Fay, but instead he just packed his daughter up and took her home to mother.

Fay, while a tear clung to her lashes, said:

"I'm glad to be going back with real friends."

FOREST ARMY VAN LEAVES MONDAY

About 100 to Go With City's First Unit To Monroe

Pittsburgh's first contingent of the "conservation army" leaves for Fortress Monroe, Virginia, Monday night.

Probably 100 of this county's quota of 900 will form the first group of unmarried men between 18 and 28 with dependents who will work in the open under military regulations for six months.

Five had been given a superficial physical examination this morning at the Army recruiting station, Fourth avenue, and accepted. Fifty others, sent by relief organizations, were to be examined today by Capt. P. J. McFadden, of the Medical Reserve Corps, U. S. Army.

FIRST RECRUIT

The first recruit from this district was John H. Hand, 25, of 309 William street, South Hills. He has not worked since March, 1932, and for a long time before that he had no steady employment.

He had worked in a glass house and wallpaper factory. His dependents include his mother, Mrs. Mary McAllister, his step-father, John McAllister, a step-brother and step-sister.

Recruit No. 2 was Ralph Dietrich, 18, of 2555 Carson street. His dependents are his mother, father, three brothers and a sister.

SEVEN TO AID

No. 3 is James T. Mansfield, 24, of 2 Denver street, who will help support his mother, father and five brothers. Only one of the latter had part-time employment.

Others of the first five enrolled are John Carroll, 19, of 83 Overbeck street, who supports his mother, Mrs. Anna Carroll, and Melville E. Campbell, 25, Negro, of 2817 Webster avenue, who supports his mother, Mrs. Carrie Campbell.

Maj. William Buerkle, commander of the recruiting station, explained that a complete physi-

BEER CHECKED BY BOTTLE SHORTAGE

Plants Rush Work to Meet Container 'Drought'

There was plenty of beer to be had today but it wasn't in bottles.

The three Pittsburgh breweries, working night and day shifts, expected however that the situation would be remedied by nightfall.

Local dispensaries were supplying the thirsty from barrels, but those who wished to "tote" it home were disappointed.

The "drought" wasn't due to a lack of beer. There's plenty of the amber fluid, brewers said, but their efforts to bottle it had been sorely taxed.

The sun broke through the clouds at the plant of the Independent Brewing Company, South Side, today as four carloads of bottles arrived from Fairmont, W. Va., and two carloads of cases were received from Chicago. While these were not sufficient to meet the unprecedented demand, they would help, it was said.

The cooperage department of the brewery was busy fitting up old barrels and making new ones. This work was delayed by a meeting of the stockholders in the barrel-wash room yesterday, it was learned.

A case of 3.2 beer sent to President Roosevelt by airplane was delivered late yesterday, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington.

North Side police early today were assigned to guard E. W. Jarvis and 400 cases of beer at 3406 Evergreen road. Jarvis asked police protection after he had received a warning that an attempt was to be made to "hi-jack" his cargo.

CALLS CHIEF POWERS TO PARLEY ON TARIFFS

Asks Drastic Rights To Deal for World Economic Gain

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Moving with a swiftness that made the foreign diplomatic corps in Washington gasp, President Roosevelt today had invited virtually the whole world to send representatives here to discuss "realistic action" for economic rehabilitation.

Japan, China and the so-called A-B-C group in South America—Argentine, Brazil and Chile—were added to the list of powers invited to send representatives. Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany already have been invited.

FIGHTS TRADE BARRIERS

President Roosevelt hopes to be able to present these representatives of the principal powers with an American program for world economic recovery based on removal of trade barriers through international co-operation.

State Department experts are working to have the nucleus of the program ready when Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain arrives.

President Roosevelt also hopes to obtain soon from Congress the trade bargaining power to enable him to conclude agreements on his own authority. Experts are working on the draft of the resolution asking this authority.

SHUNS TARIFF LIMIT

Both the White House and State Department deny reports that it has been decided to include a recommendation for a flat 10 per cent horizontal reduction in tariffs.

On the contrary, the President is said to be desirous of avoiding a percentage limitation. He prefers to let Congress have the power to veto his agreements within 30 or 60 days after they are concluded. During this time, Congress could decide whether or not he had made excessive reductions. If Congress failed to act within the veto period, the agreements would become effective automatically.

One of the principal purposes in inviting so many foreign nations is the belief of President Roosevelt and Secretary of State

JAP GUNS PERIL U. S. SOLDIERS

PEIPING, April 8.—(AP.)—The United States legation was informed today that bullets from fighting about Chinwangtao were falling in the summer camp of the 15th Infantry Regiment, United States Army.

About 800 members of the U. S. Infantry regiment are stationed along the railway leading from that region to Peiping.

There were no reports of American casualties.

Reports of the Rengo (Japanese) News Agency said Manchukuan troops had occupied the seaport and disarmed the Chinese garrison there.

The reports told, too, that the Japanese had demanded the evacuation by the Chinese of the entire area south of the Great Wall as far as the Lwan River.

HERRON DENIES BLOCK WILL GO

Acting Mayor John S. Herron is certain that senior Capt. Anthony Block, in charge of the North Side police district, is not slated for dismissal or demotion. He said so today when questioned relative to a reputed disagreement between Block and one of his subordinates.

Herron said:

"I don't believe there is any truth in that story, but I'll see a certain councilman and ask him."

The story being told in police circles is that Block, acting on Herron's public statement that the speakeasies must go, had closed a well known spot "just off Federal street."

It was opened a short time later by one of Block's subordinates. The subordinate is said to have remarked to the proprietor:

"Well, don't pay any attention to him. A certain councilman and I are running this part of the town."

Today it was said the place is still open and the report said that Block would be removed when the contemplated shakeup in the police force occurs after Council votes in a new Mayor.

'Angels' Hale Hill Man Into Court

Two angels from the theater land of "The Green Pastures" dropped into the mundane Central Police Court today to find out what happened to three diamond rings, missing from their room in the Shamrock Hotel, 604 Wylie avenue.

Dapper John Hill, of 2512 Wylie avenue, self-confessed "contact man" for Hill Politician Gus Greenlee, was accused.

Mrs. Edna Throw, an angel in the Biblical show, and Mrs. Frances Smith, who takes part in the heavenly fish fry, were the accuses, but Hill was discharged.

DRUNK ARRESTS DOWN 25 P. C.

Legalized beer brought a 25 per cent decrease in the number of drunks in city police stations.

During the first 24 hours of the legal flow of the amber fluid 27 were charged with drunkenness. Yesterday morning, 18 hours of prohibition and six hours of legalized beer had produced a quota of 35 luckless wayfarers before the same magistrates.

None of those arraigned either day considered themselves to be "beer drunks." Most of them were described by police as old offenders who stick to "moonie."

GANG BOMBS BIG BREWERY

CHICAGO, April 8.—(INS.)—In the midst of Chicago's three-day celebration of legalized beer disgruntled gangsters today bombed the huge Prima Brewing Company plant, blasting in a large steel door and shattering scores of windows.

A complete night crew of workmen was in the brewery when the explosion occurred at 1:30 a. m. After inspecting the damage, estimated at $1,000, police said the bomb was intended to explode a large alcohol tank 15 feet from the doorway. The tank, however, was empty when the bomb exploded.

Authorities said the attack was part of the gangland offensive to seize control of the legal beer industry by forcing breweries to deal with retailers through gang "salesmen." Two softdrink parlors have been bombed and one purveyor killed since the campaign of intimidation began.

Daughter Absolved, Chinese Gets 5 Years

Lee Fook Chew, 49, Chinatown merchant who pleaded guilty to illegal traffic in opium two months ago, was sentenced to serve five years in a federal penitentiary by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in Federal Court today. The Chinese, in entering his plea, absolved his attractive 19-year-old daughter, New Gee Lee, a graduate of Fifth Avenue High School, and his son, George Chick Lee.

His car was halted after a three-mile chase, after it has been sighted "zig-zagging." The archduke admitted, police said, that he had attended a party welcoming the arrival of the new beer, but denied that he was intoxicated.

LONG BEACH, Cal., April 8.—(INS.)—Today, five weeks after an earthquake shock struck this vicinity, a mild aftershock was recorded in Long Beach, Los Angeles, and several other cities of southern California at 2:11 a. m.

Utility officials said that no damage was reported. The quake was severe enough in Long Beach and Los Angeles to sway lights in newspaper offices.

Betty Ill, Marriage To Walker Delayed

CANNES, France, April 8.—(INS).—Betty Compton, actress and bride-to-be of former Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, is seriously ill with intestinal influenza, it was announced today.

Shortly after midnight, it was disclosed, the former stage star was removed from her villa, the Beau Geste, to a private clinic.

Miss Compton's illness has indefinitely delayed her marriage to Walker. The nuptial ceremony was tentatively set for April 13.

Miss Compton's physician, Dr. Joseph G. Fisher, an American, formerly of San Francisco, told International News Service:

"Miss Compton's condition is serious but is not necessarily critical.

"It was believed she could receive better care at the clinic than at her own home. There is considerable influenza here, and it affects different persons in different ways."

Miss Compton was stricken suddenly while dining with Walker and her mother at her villa. Her mother telephoned to Dr. Fisher, who has been attending Walker since he arrived here.

As soon as Miss Compton had been made comfortable at the clinic, Walker returned to his hotel, keeping in close touch with the hospital by telephone.

Beer Flow Starts U. S. On Spending Spree

Associated Press.

The jingle of coins in cash registers and the rustle of bank notes in long-empty pockets accompanied the gurgle of beer today as many parts of the country announced:

"Business is better."

Thousands knew again what it is to have a job; many stores reported increased business as beer, smiling weather, and the approach of Easter combined to stir demand; brewers everywhere rubbed their hands and grinned happily; Dun and Bradstreet's Trade Journal, reported a general pick-up in business.

The friends of beer were prepared to attribute most of it to that beverage, a contention that beer's foes were expected to dispute. Comprehensive data was lacking, but anti-prohibitionists pointed with pride to figures from several cities.

In New York, for instance, where thousands were talking of men being re-employed and equipment purchased, the city officials announced the receipt of $200,000 in fees for permits to sell beer.

At Chicago, the nation's second largest city, the Herald and Examiner said merchants agreed the first day of beer was one of the greatest spending sprees since the 1929 crash. This, however, was attributed partly to improved weather.

Chicago railroads announced heavy beer movements and foresaw more jobs.

San Francisco sounded a cheery note, with re-employment estimated as high as 7,000. The employment gain in Los Angeles was estimated unofficially at 10,000.

A bottle shortage forced glassworks in Southern Pennsylvania and West Virginia to put on night shifts. Clarksburg, W. Va., reported draft horses are at a premium for eastern breweries.

PINCHOT APPEALS TO PUBLIC TO FORCE RELIEF ACTION

GOVERNOR SEES 2,000,000 IDLE IMPERILED

Whip for Legislators Urged to 'Save State From Disgrace'

HARRISBURG, April 8.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot says he believes 2,000,000 jobless Pennsylvanians "will be in to starve or riot—or both" before May unless the Legislature provides immediately an adequate relief fund.

He made this statement yesterday in a letter to 6,000 representative citizens. He stated:

"It now appears that the only force which can overwhelm the political pettiness of a majority of the members of the General Assembly and save Pennsylvania from impending disgrace and disorder is an informed and militant public opinion.

"On Monday, the Legislature will convene for the fifteenth week of the session. It will convene without having passed a single important bill. Nor has it provided for the relief of the unemployed.

"Unless immediate and drastic action is forthcoming, all available relief funds will be exhausted in another week or so."

He said four courses are now open to the General Assembly. They are:

1—To take his program to provide $20,000,000 for relief.

2—To draw up an equally good or better plan.

3—To pass a "fake relief measure, stealing money from other vital state functions and throwing it away to inefficient poor boards."

4—To continue to do nothing—"and take the consequences."

Either of the last two courses, he said, means disaster.

66,000 Needy in County Menaced by Lack of Aid

More than 66,000 families dependent on relief from state and federal funds in Allegheny County trembled today lest their relief be cut off with exhaustion of funds Tuesday.

Refusal of a $4,000,000 loan to the state by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and failure of the Legislature to provide state funds, as well as an increasing deficit in the administration funds of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board since April 1 provided the threatening clouds on the horizon.

While the task of providing food alone occupied the attention of agencies yesterday the Advisory Council of the Pennsylvania State Employment Offices of Western Pennsylvania, composed of representatives of industry, came out strongly for work relief.

Three resolutions were adopted. One asked withdrawal of the state's ruling that workers on relief projects must have compensation. The others urged that public relief funds go in part, at least, to work and that self-liquidating public works be stimulated and aided financially by federal agencies.

FLAYS PINCHOT FOR REPEAL BILL VETO

Pitcairn Denounces Governor's Action As 'Demagoguery'

PHILADELPHIA, April 8.—Gov. Pinchot's statement in vetoing the McClure repeal convention bill is characterized as a "masterpiece of demagoguery" by Raymond Pitcairn, head of the allied organizations opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment. Pitcairn said:

"With typical Pinchot sophistry he adroitly dodges the object of the McClure bill, which is fair representation based upon population. The Governor cannot escape the conclusion that the only fair way of electing delegates to the convention would be to elect all delegates at large.

"Gov. Pinchot was obliged to abandon the unfair scheme of choosing delegates according to legislative districts after the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the press and other liberal forces of the state demonstrated the gross unfairness of this plan. Under this scheme, which the Governor espoused at the instance of the professional drys, a country district would have had 26 times the representation of a given district in Philadelphia. He no longer advocates this plan.

"The transcendent issue which rises above the wet and dry question is one of the right of the people to a fair constitutional convention."

HARRISBURG, April 8.—Gov. Pinchot in a statement yesterday declared:

"The state must take steps at once to control the beer traffic before the beer traffic controls the state."

GUARANTEE BILL FACES FIGHT IN SENATE

Measure That Protects Only Federal Banks Meets Opposition

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The Administration's new program for guaranteeing deposits in member banks of the Federal Reserve System today faced a threat of stiff opposition in the Senate from an insurgent group, demanding like protection for depositors in state banks.

Drafted by a Senate Banking and Currency Committee, headed by Senator Carter Glass, (Dem.) of Virginia, the measure appeared likely to provoke another act in the warfare between Glass and Senator Huey P. Long, (Dem.) of Louisiana.

The "Kingfish" declared he would oppose the bill, unless it provided some protection for depositors in state banks.

The Guarantee Bill was said to have the President's approval "in principle." Senator Glass meanwhile was commissioned to see the President and secure his recommendations on all details of the tentative draft. When the President approves it, the bill will be introduced jointly in House and Senate, probably Monday.

As now drawn, the bill would create a federal liquidating corporation to handle an "insurance fund" for the guarantee of deposits in Federal Reserve member banks. All state banks would be invited to join the system under rather favorable terms.

The depositors of any closed bank would be protected by payment of "insurance," equal to any loss, by the liquidating corporation.

25 Per Cent Jewish Blood To Oust German Officials

BERLIN, April 8.—(INS.)—The exact amount of Jewish blood which henceforth will serve to exclude Germans from official posts was defined today in a decree adopted by the Cabinet of Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

Twenty-five per cent Jewish blood will be sufficient to classify the possessor as a member of the Jewish race.

Consequently, if one grandparent of an officeholder in the Reich was a Jew, the incumbent will be ousted as an undesirable.

The only Jews who will be allowed to remain in government service are those who were employed before the war, who served at the front, or who lost fathers or sons in combat.

Socialists who entered the government service after the November revolution of 1918 will be ousted automatically.

The new law applies equally to local and federal government posts.

Ousted Socialists will receive three months' salary but no pension. Jews dismissed from their posts will be entitled to full pensions, plus full allowances for wives and children.

SOVIET DEFIANT TO BRITAIN

By LINTON WELLS
International News Service.

MOSCOW, April 8.—The Soviet press issued a defi to Great Britain today, announcing Russia's refusal to be "intimidated" by the commercial embargo contemplated by the British government in reprisal for the arrest of six British employes of Metropolitan-Vickers, Ltd.

It was the first time the Soviet newspapers commented extensively on the recent bitter debate in the House of Commons in London over the Russian government's action in prosecuting the British engineers, who are accused of sabotage and espionage.

Under a three-column headline reading, "We Won't Be Intimidated," the semi-official newspaper Izvestia characterized the projected British embargo as "a threat of material damage to the Soviet Union."

F. R. WILL RUSH RELIEF PLANS

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt is preparing for an early conclusion of his domestic emergency program and it will be centered on more jobs and domestic debt relief to offset deflationary effects.

He will add shortly to the $500,000,000 direct relief bill, securities regulation, and the farm refinancing and commodity price-lifting measures pending in Congress the following:

A $2,000,000,000 city home mortgage refinancing plan.

Two or three billion dollars for public works to increase employment.

Banking reforms, probably with provision for speeding payments of deposits in closed banks and insurance for future deposits.

A broad program for development of the Tennessee Valley with immediate restoration of the Muscle Shoals, Alabama power and nitrate plant.

GUARD ILLINOIS STRIKE ZONE

DU QUOIN, Ill., April 8.—(AP.)—Special deputies, state highway policemen and citizens were on guard in Perry County today to prevent a recurrence of violence in the mine union strife which resulted in the fatal shooting of two men yesterday, after a 14-year-old schoolgirl had been seriously wounded the night before.

The deaths brought to a total of 13 the number of fatalities in the long struggle between the Progressive Miners' Union and the United Mine Workers for domination of the Illinois coal fields.

James Attes and Henry Arnold were fatally wounded by deputy sheriffs who attempted to arrest them as suspects in the shooting of Laverne Miller, schoolgirl, at her home Thursday night. Attes and Arnold both were members of the Progressive Miners' Union. Officers said they resisted arrest.

The Miller girl was wounded when persons in an automobile fired at the home of her father, Vernon Miller.

G. O. P. DRAFTS OWN FARM BILL

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP.)—A complete substitute for the Democratic farm program, stripping away the proposed board powers for Secretary Wallace, but including the administration mortgage relief plan, was being formulated today by a committee of Senate Republicans for presentation to a party conference on Monday.

The administration bill now is before the Senate, its passage expected some time next week, despite quite considerable opposition. The Republicans, not able to settle on a program before the measure was taken up yesterday, hoped to be able to present a united front of opposition by Monday.

In place of the Democratic provisions for sweeping authority for Secretary Wallace to raise farm prices, the Republican committee proposed the bill of Senator Carey (Rep.), of Wyoming, for leasing or renting a maximum of 50,000,000 acres, this to be financed by a 2 per cent tax on the sale price of the commodities.

SEEKS SIX-HOUR RAILROAD DAY

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP.)—The 30-hour work week bill has been held up in the Senate by a motion entered by Trammell (Dem.), Florida, to reconsider the vote by which it was passed.

Trammell made the motion, which he said he would call up Tuesday, at the same time the bill's author, Black (Dem.), Alabama, offered another measure to establish a six-hour day, 42 hours a week, for railroads.

Trammell told newspapermen he would offer several amendments, one to extend to imports the ban against interstate shipments of industrial commodities produced by labor working more than 30 hours.

Democratic House leaders have put such legislation aside until after the emergency program has been passed.

A statement by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said:

"Labor regards the passage of the Black bill by the Senate as an outstanding achievement."

GOLFERS RALLY IN FEE FIGHT

A public meeting will be held next week by golfers to devise a campaign to have County Commissioners reconsider their action of a few weeks ago increasing the price of annual golf permits for county parks from $10 to $20.

Plans for the meeting were started by Attorney William Hilldorfer after he had represented several hundred golfers at a hearing yesterday before the County Commissioners. It was decided to appoint a committee and to select an authority on golf courses to discuss fees with the County Commissioners.

County officials and golfers agree that the receipts should be sufficient to pay for the upkeep of the courses.

Davis To See Hitler; Meets Von Hindenburg

BERLIN, April 8.—(INS.)—Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador-at-large, conferred today with President Paul von Hindenburg, octogenarian chief executive of the Reich.

They exchanged formal greetings, after which Davis was closeted with Foreign Minister von Neurath at the Foreign Office.

Davis' scheduled interview with Chancellor Hitler was delayed to permit the American diplomat and German dictator a longer talk. After this interview, Davis was to discuss details of the forthcoming world economic conference with officials of the Trade Ministry.

It appeared today that Chancellor Hitler would not go to Washington in response to President Roosevelt's invitation to a German representative to discuss problems preliminary to the world economic conference.

Reliable opinion was that Dr. Hans Luther, new German ambassador to Washington, will represent the Reich in the Washington discussions.

TO CUT RELIEF

E. C. Dunbar, in charge of the reforestation work for the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board, said today that relief will stop for families with members working for the government. A family receiving relief which sent a son to serve in the camps would have its 90 cents a member a week cut off.

Dunbar said:

"The worker would have to send back a large part of his $30 a month to the family."

The men going out tomorrow were selected by the relief agencies from families which were considered in the greatest need. The first successful applicants to arrive at the Allegheny County Relief Board headquarters late yesterday were sent by the Salvation Army.

Applications being distributed by the agencies are being countersigned by George P. Mills, Allegheny County director of relief. The selection of men will be continued next week until the first allotment is complete.

$1,500,000 Wharf Job Proposed by Herron

Mayor John S. Herron has suggested that a wharf improvement plan representing a cost of about $1,500,000 be presented to City Council for approval.

That is approximately the amount of money in a people's bond issue for new streets voted in 1928.

Herron's proposal was made yesterday to the special committee appointed by Council to study wharf betterment. It suggested that city funds may be available at once to build boulevards along the wharves.

The committee favors a plan to build two wide one-way traffic arteries on the river fronts from Smithfield street around the Point to Tenth street.

City Engineer Charles M. Reppert yesterday estimated the cost of the waterfront improvements exclusive of a two-level traffic circle at the Point at about $1,800,000.

Time is to be taken to allow interested civic organizations to study the wharf plan. The Water street highways would be arranged to connect eventually with the Boulevard of the Allies.

Below the traffic platforms space would be provided for automobile parking and river commerce. River interests have not yet expressed their opinion of the project.

L. W. Monteverde heads the committee planning the improvement. He hopes to enlist state and federal aid.

BAIL SOUGHT FOR MASTER TO DELAY DEATH OF SANDY

DOOMED DOG'S OWNER LACKS APPEAL FUND

Fate May Wait Return Of Visiting Judge Next Month

Sandy, the dog doomed to die to keep his master out of a jail cell, has at least a month to live, it appeared today.

Attorney Charles D. Coll was preparing to post bond for the dog's owner, Frank Sechan, pending the return in May of Visiting Judge S. L. Reed, who passed sentence on the dog.

Before leaving the city yesterday, Judge Reed informed President Judge Samuel Gardner that any action Judge Gardner took in the case in Reed's absence would satisfy him, Attorney Coll announced.

Accordingly, Coll said he would take Sechan before Judge Gardner Monday morning to ask bail pending Judge Reed's return.

Coll said the only avenue open to free Sechan of Judge Reed's verdict calling for the dog's execution was an appeal to Superior Court. Sechan, unemployed, said he could not raise the $250 the appeal would cost.

Sechan was ordered jailed yesterday for failing to execute the dog. After pleading guilty recently to a charge of keeping a ferocious dog after Sandy had bitten a 4-year-old child, Sechan was granted a six months' parole on the condition that he kill the animal.

While the officers were searching for Sechan yesterday he appeared in court with Attorney Coll, and Judge H. H. Rowand agreed to hold the case over until Monday.

200 FLEE BLAZE IN BROOKLINE THEATER

Firemen and Youths By Calm Actions Save Stampede

Nearly 200 patrons fled from the Brookline Theater, 734 Brookline boulevard, when fire broke out in the projection room and filled the theater with smoke last night.

When the flames broke out, a city fireman, off duty, rushed from a rear seat to the stage and warned the patrons to march out calmly. Meanwhile, John Praegner, 15, of 801 Rossmore avenue, and Jack Taylerson, 17, of Gallion avenue, South Hills High School students, took positions at the entrance to one of the aisles and saved many of the excited women and children from being trampled.

Praegner said:

"Jack and I were sitting in the rear of the theater when someone shouted 'fire'! We assisted some of the women and children to the doors."

James B. Christy, the operator, attempted to extinguish the flames, but fled to the street when they spread to other reels of film.

Battalion Chief Saul Klein said the fire apparently had been caused by an electrical spark. He estimated the damage at $400.

The identity of the fireman who shouted the warning was not learned by police.

SUPREME COURT MAY SET FATE OF MOONEY

Legal Fight Not to End Should California Refuse Freedom

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The celebrated Tom Mooney case may be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States. It depends upon the outcome of Mooney's new trial in California late this month.

This information was revealed exclusively to International News Service today by Frank P. Walsh, the noted lawyer, who will be chief counsel for the defense when Mooney goes on trial in San Francisco on April 26. The trial is expected to attract world-wide attention.

Walsh said:

"If Mooney is acquitted by the jury and if Governor James Rolph of California then fails to pardon him, we are going to carry the case to the United States Supreme Court."

Mooney is serving a life term in San Quentin Prison on conviction of having participated in the Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco in 1916, in which 10 persons were killed and 40 injured.

The indictment on which Mooney will face the court late this month is the last of several against him which grew out of the bombing. Mooney and Warren K. Billings were both convicted at the original trial. Billings is serving a life sentence at Folsom Prison. Mooney always has contended he was "framed" and "railroaded" to jail.

DEFENSE RECRUITS AIDES

In connection with his plan to carry the Mooney case to the Supreme Court, if necessary, Walsh disclosed that John F. Finerty, a prominent attorney of Washington, has joined the defense counsel. The third defense lawyer will be Leo Gallagher, of Los Angeles.

Walsh asserted:

"I think we will be able to produce 50 to 75 witnesses to completely refute all charges of Mooney's guilt and to prove he was nowhere near when the bombing occurred."

SKIES CLEARING IN FLOOD AREA

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 8.—(AP.)—Clearing skies today led lowlanders in flooded sections of Mississippi, Arkansas and Tennessee to hope the swollen waters had done their worst, but levee dynamiting and the appearance of buffalo gnats complicated matters.

The refugee problem threatened to assume major proportions should the water continue its stand over the thousands of acres of low country it has invaded.

Levees at a number of places, particularly near Webb and Sumner, Miss., have showed signs of weakening. Three hundred Negro convicts from Parchman Prison Farm have been sent into the district to bolster them.

Attempts have been made to dynamite levees in both Mississippi and Arkansas, but guards that patrol the levees in times of high water have frustrated most of these. Levee guards at several places in Mississippi have exchanged shots with men who apparently were trying to destroy levees to protect their own land.

LAWYER FACES U. S. CHARGE

Attorney H. Lee Ratner, of 124 South Highland avenue, was charged with subornation of perjury in a complaint filed yesterday by a special agent of the United States Bureau of Investigation before the federal commissioner. He furnished $2,500 bond for a preliminary hearing.

Miss Agnes Paige Ferich, known as "the platinum blonde," in pleading guilty last week before Federal Judge R. M. Gibson to perjury in the trial of Harry Reitzell last December, said she gave her testimony at the suggestion of Ratner and that he coached her in her replies as a government witness.

Ratner, in court when Miss Ferich made the accusation, said:

"It's an unmitigated lie."

Miss Ferich was to be taken today to the Federal Industrial Reformatory at Alderson, W. Va., to serve 18 months on the perjury charge. Reitzell, convicted on a Mann act charge, is serving a three-year term at Atlanta.

EXPERTS FACE AKRON QUIZ

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(INS.)—The leading airship experts of the nation today were sought by the House Naval Affairs sub-committee on aeronautics in an effort to fathom the mystery of the real cause of the Akron's tragic plunge into the ocean.

Admitting the first session of the inquisitorial body failed to give an answer to the question, members were engaged in canvassing a list of experts.

It is expected that Commander C. E. Rosendahl, the Navy's leading airship skipper and former commander of the Akron; Dr. Karl Arnstein, chief builder, and many other engineers and experts will be summoned.

Representative Boland (Dem.), of Pennsylvania, who predicted the Akron woould never be right after she fell while being taken out of her hangar last year, said testimony confirmed his opinion.

BRIBE CHARGED IN ATTACK CASE

DECATUR, Ala., April 8.—(AP.)—A charge that defense witnesses in the Scottboro case were "bought" was on the record today as attorneys mustered final arguments.

The accusation came from Solicitor Wade Wright, of Decatur, as he argued for reconviction of Heywood Patterson, one of a group of Negroes charged with attacking two white women.

Wright called attention to the unexpected appearance of Miss Ruby Bates, who testified in the original trials that she and Mrs. Victoria Price were attacked by nine Negroes while riding a freight train two years ago. Missing several weeks, she came into court dressed in a new spring outfit, and repudiated her earlier story.

Wright demanded:

"Are you going to stand for justice being bought?"

Samuel S. Liebowitz, of New York, chief of defense counsel, immediately entered motion for mistrial, but was overruled.

Mrs. Mills was found choked to death in a mountain cabin near Tomahawk after several days of religious ceremonies of a mountain cult. Efforts to obtain a jury from this county, Martin, failed.

The Life of Samson, Strong Man of the Bible -:- CHAPTER VI -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

Samson loved a wicked woman named Delilah, who lived in the Vale of Sorek. She was in the pay of the Philistines, who wanted her to entice from Samson the secret of his strength. Samson lied to Delilah, telling her that if he were bound with seven green withes he would be as weak as any other man.

But when Delilah had bound him with the withes he broke them like threads. Delilah pouted when she saw this and kept nagging him to tell her his secret.

Samson gave in. He "told her all his heart"—his long hair was his strength. During the night while Samson slept Delilah had a man come and shave his head.

"The Philistines be upon thee, Samson!" cried Delilah. He woke, helpless as a child, and was bound with fetters of brass. Both his eyes were put out and he was put in prison at Gaza.

BURSTING BALLOON INJURES EVEREST FLIGHT AIDES

ACCIDENT MARS PLAN FOR NEW PEAK HOP

By E. C. SHEPHERD

PURNEA, India, April 7.—(By Wireless.)—The Houston Mount Everest pilots found flying impossible today owing to strong winds. The day was marred by a serious accident to S. N. Gupta, meteorological officer here, and two assistants.

Gupta and his aides were about to release a balloon when it burst and the hydrogen caught fire. The men were badly burned about the face, shoulders and hands and feet. The expedition probably will have to take its own wind observations pending the arrival of a relief officer.

PICTURES CONNECTED

Progress has been made in the examination of the vertical survey photographs made during the flight over Mount Everest Monday, which now prove to afford better results than at first believed. One set of eight overlapping photographs provids a connected strip of mountain country leading up to snow fields and a steep ridge. This appears to be on a line between Chamlang and Lhotse.

Used in conjunction with the excellent oblique views obtained of this district, the photographs should be of great value in establishing precise geographical features of the Everest range.

The photographs in the strip are clear. There is practically no distortion or tilt. Allowance for drift during the flight was remarkably accurate. This product is particularly gratifying as a proof that mountain surveying can be done from the air.

DOUBTERS ANSWERED

The experts at home expressed doubt whether an airplane could be kept steady enough to make level strip photographs. But here a connected strip has been made almost up to the edge of Mt. Everest while flying at a height over 30,000 feet.

If a strip three times as long can be made in the second flight, which is pending, the expedition will have achieved its main end by demonstrating that an air survey of the Everest region can be made, given freedom to make a series of flights in the district.

Lahr to Fill Cantor's Shoes As Comedian With Rubinoff In Radio 'Comeback'

By AIRCASTER

When the Broadway comedians had made sure of the fact that Eddie Cantor would fade—for the summer at least—from the Sunday night coffee hour on April 23, they began to figure what a nice juicy job was open—a job that transcends all possible stage prestige, providing you can make good.

The march upon the studios for auditions assumed a similarity to a regimental advance, and the samples that the Holtzes, Berles, Richmans, Prices, etc., offered savored so of hasty preparation that it was just too bad.

That is, until the gents who pay the bills heard Bert Lahr, the wag who didn't make good on the Magic Carpet, but who has waxed wise to himself and who has studied and prepared no end for such a break.

Lahr has been picked for Cantor's shoes, but will become the pivot for a variety show rather than an echo of Cantor, and with Rubinoff still fiddling and Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey giving voice to the day's popular ditties, the presentation that begins its run on April 30 seems to promise satisfaction.

* * *

Only one hitch threatens to prevent the signing of Jimmy Durante as the summer successor of Jack Pearl on the Thursday night bill. Jimmy was auditioned in the role of Cyrano de Bergerac and movie moguls were on hand. They insisted that if Jimmy becomes an air hero, his stuff must be good enough to be considered a satisfactory build-up for his forthcoming pictures.

Despite all the denials that followed the statement made here recently, Mildred Bailey will become a Columbia artist as soon as her vaudevilling in Chicago is over.

Ben Bernie has it all figured out. Says he:

"Congress having legalized beer, the government's ship comes in the moment the schooner crosses the bar."

Shields' Political Review on WCAE

Mark Shields, Sun-Telegraph political editor, reviews and analyzes the latest political developments of both local and national scope during his weekly talk on WCAE at 6 p. m.

News flashes by Louis Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, are broadcast today over WCAE-WJAS at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m. and 2:15 p. m., and over WCAE at 6:30 p. m.

TAX YIELD HERE SATISFIES CITY CONTROLLER

Tax collections in Pittsburgh held up well for the first three months of 1933 despite the bank holiday, according to Controller James P. Kerr.

Total collections for the three months ending March 1 were $10,063,245, compared with $12,129,318 in the same period last year.

A large part of the decrease is ascribed to the city millage cut of approximately 10 per cent, and to large individual and corporate taxpayers using the installment method, which has a tendency to keep early collections lower.

Collections of miscellaneous revenue, delinquent taxes and water rents showed a slight increase from last year. The miscellaneous account includes traffic court fines.

Collections represented 45.42 per cent of the original billings for the year compared with 50.44 per cent last year. The city's accumulated deficit at the end of 1932 was $1,345,650.

From the Census Bureau at Washington, through the Associated Press, came the cheering news that, excluding that spent for permanent improvements, revenue receipts by the city government exceeded expenditures by $7,347,282.

Totaling the expenditures, including that spent for new schools, bridges, boulevards and other permanent improvements, the Census Bureau found Pittsburgh spent $71,261,081 during 1931 and collected $56,445,997. Most of the permanent improvements were financed by bond issues. Annual payments towards sinking funds to wipe out those bond liabilities and for annual interest payments are included in the current expenditure accounts of the city.

The per capita cost of the operation of general city departments in 1931 was $59.16 as compared with $57.95 the previous year, and $25.38 in 1917, when few major public improvements of a permanent nature were being made. The most expensive item in the 1931 set-up was the public school system, which cost the taxpayers $16,059,966.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

There still is a radio aversion to the use of the word "beer." Many listeners at first commented here concerning the word. There seems to be something about it that suggest shivers to a great many people. Not only is that noticed in this community, but the same condition generally prevails throughout the country.

I thought I'd listen to one of the national news broadcasters to see if I could pick up a distinctive word that sounded a bit more mellifluous, and in his treatment of the subject the same hesitancy in the use of the word was noted. The discussion mentioned "amber liquid," "foamy fluid" and "malt beverages."

Perhaps the recent association with illegality has made it a harsh word for many people, or maybe because of the children who listen in parents don't like the word. If the people continue to have that aversion it will affect future radio advertisers more than it will news broadcasters because, after all, their product is beer and if they are uncertain in using the word it might be considered by the listening public that the brewers are not so sure of public opinion.

It will be interesting to note how this word "takes on" and whether a substitute will replace it. In the meantime, if you have a good expression to cover the subject we'd be glad to have it.

Miss Virginia Cole, of South Brownsville, is deeply concerned over the fate of Sandy, the doomed dog, who appeared as a globe trotter one day. Let me assure her that everything has been done by the defense to change the sentence.

There are always two sides to a question and the courts are bound by the law as well as the people and many a judge who personally would like to make exceptions in different cases passes sentence contrary to his own beliefs because, like other elective officers, he has sworn to uphold the laws no matter what his private opinions may be.

GABRIEL OVER THE WHITE HOUSE

Reconstruction Corps Created by President

Gabriel Over the White House

Adapted from the novel, "Gabriel Over the White House," and from the motion picture produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—a Cosmopolitan production.

(CONTINUATION OF CHAPTER VIII.)

Prompt to the hour Kuhl and his lieutenants arrived to keep their all-important appointment with the President.

Kuhl's organization had now grown to something like a million men and their presence in ever-increasing numbers was a source of some danger not only to the large cities, but to the smaller towns and districts in which they were camped. All the elements of sabotage and disorder were there just waiting to be ignited by one false move from Washington.

They assembled around a large oval table especially set up for them in the East Room of the White House. It was an extraordinary gathering.

The President dealt gently with them.

"I feel certain," he said, "that the last thing you are after is charity—money for idleness, with all the physical and moral demoralization which follows in its wake. Such a suggestion would be an insult to the fine American manhood you represent.

The President went on to say that the dislocation of employment by the collapse of trade had created a huge surplus of labor which could not be reabsorbed in other crafts and industries until prosperity returned. He was not content that this reservoir of energy and service should be allowed to stagnate and deteriorate when there was so much to be done.

President's Proposal

What he proposed would be difficult and arduous work for some, in most cases labor of a sort they were unused to. It might entail occasional hardship, loneliness and even danger, but those who took their share in this work of national reconstruction would be the new pioneers, blazing a trail as glorious with hope and possibilities as ever their forefathers did before them.

The President proposed to create a National Reconstruction Corps, the men to be enrolled from the ranks of the unemployed for a fixed period of service and to be subject to a modified form of military discipline. They would receive army rates of pay.

Kuhl and his lieutenants found this completely unexpected proposal too much to take in at one time.

Four nights later a million squatters, in parks, in fields and in some instances in large congregations by the roadside, again heard and saw the President of the United States appealing directly to them as a national group.

"You have been called the army of the workless," came the voice of the nation's leader clear and resonant on the night air. "It is not an ignoble description. You are an army, a gallant army. One which has conducted itself with discipline and restraint. . . . You have created an honorable tradition . . . an example which I propose to take advantage of for the benefit of the nation . . . . . I am going to give your army formal recognition, not as the army of the unemployed, but as active soldiers in the service of their country . . soldiers trained not to the arts of war, but in the service of peace . . trained not to destroy, but to create; not to pull down, but to build."

* * *

The experiment of the National Reconstruction Corps created world-wide interest and its development was watched with no little envy. Even two years later, when I happened to walk in Peale Lindsey's office, I found him undergoing a searching cross-examination at the hands of an English journalist and how the United States had solved its unemployment problem.

Moved to Camps

The Englishman, a commonplace-looking person by the name of Watson, shy but brilliant, had evidently asked about figures when I strolled in, Peale introduced me and asked me to stay.

Peale explained to the admiring Englishman that the Corps had grown from two to six millions in the first nine months but that now the numbers were falling off by hundreds of thousands a month.

"The first two months," said Peale, "the men were moved to appropriate camps. Under experts from the regular army they soon respond to treatment. Regular food, physical exercise and absence of worry restored even the down and outs to robust health.

"Both married men and single men received army pay but home allowances were made in addition to the families of the married, direct to the wives.

"In order, however, to equalize the wages paid civilians on special works of public utility the President after a howl of rage from the Corps cut the civilian rates of pay and arranged for all wages to be pooled and administered by workmen's committees. From the pool money was distributed directly to wives in proportion to the number of children or dependents on pretty much the same way as the home allowances of the Reconstruction Corps."

"How was it received?" Watson inquired.

"Like a pain in the neck," Peale replied; "but that's not for publication."

Plan Worked Well

He lapsed back into official phraseology. "It was very unpopular in the beginning. Even married men hated the idea of nearly two-thirds of their pay being given directly to their families. The single civilian workers, who even then were better off than the unmarried men in the Corps, screamed their heads off."

"Still, it's working satisfactorily now, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes," said Peale, "its undisputed fairness and the great saving to states and to industry generally in reducing the basic rate of wages, without inflicting hardship on individual families, have made the plan welcome even to those who were bitterly opposed to the original idea."

"I understand that it is being adopted by individualists," Watson tentatively asserted. Peale nodded his agreement. "It was, first of all, extended to all federal and state employes; afterwards to all the railroad workers and then, as reviving industries found it necessary to revise rates in the light of the higher cost of living, the plan of family allowance as a part of wages become the recognized medium."

"It has come to stay, then?" asked Watson.

"Yes." Peale's assent had an enthusiastic note. "Not only that, but in a very short time it will be possible to graft on to it schemes for Old Age Pensions and perhaps even Sick Pay.

"Wages, home allowances and all payments for goods and materials have been paid in the new federal bill. The dollar went off gold without any more fuss or alarm than when the pound left gold in Britain and, slowly, as the new currency began to get into circulation the prices of commodities responded.

"Within the first six months much of the distress of the farmers was alleviated. They got prices for their products which enabled them to live and, what is more, the fall in the value of the dollar enabled them to meet mortgages and other financial commitments which they had taken up in the boom period.

Railroad Situation

"Of course these results would never have been possible if in the famous Roxboro v. Iowa case the Supreme Court had not ruled that debts, public or private, could be legally discharged in the new paper currency, regardless of clauses in the original agreements requiring payment in gold. That 'lawful currency' decision really saved the nation."

Peale rattled this off with the easy dexterity of one who has made similar statements scores of times before, then turned to me. "You carry on, Beek, and tell Mr. Watson of the nationalization of the railroads it's your pet scheme."

"You probably know, Mr. Watson," I commenced, "that many of the weaker carriers came into the government's possession as a result of the relief policy of the early thirties. They were simply unable to meet their debts and the government, with nearly a billion dollars at stake as a result of loans, took them over. Then with the proceeds of the 'Posterity' Loan the President caused to be secretly purchased huge blocks of common stock in the roads still privately owned."

Watson nodded. "Yes, I have always considered his railway policy one of the most remarkable achievements even of that remarkable man."

"Yes," I continued, "especially when one realizes how cheaply it was done. Why, it hardly disturbed the almost nominal price of the stocks."

"Well, after all," was Watson's comment, "no dividends had been paid for years and perfectly appalling losses were reported each quarter."

Canal Development

"Not only that," I pointed out, "but the development of air transport had driven the railroads close to ruin. Anyway rail stocks were at a big discount and holders were glad to sell at any price. Over three-quarters of the available stock was purchased by the Treasury."

"That prepared the way for electrification, I suppose?" said Watson.

"Yes," I replied, "it was one of the first big tasks of the Reconstruction Corps, and the work in every state will not be completed for another twelve months at least. But in those places where it has been finished the results are remarkable. In addition, country districts have now been equipped with light electric railways for the better marketing of their produce, and electric light has become a commonplace even in the most rural community. Why, the manufacture of the material alone has brought new prosperity to dozens of allied industries."

Peale roused himself at this point to add a final comment. "Don't be led away, Watson, by Beekman's passion for railroads. I think history probably will hold that the greatest work of the Reconstruction Corps will be the canal development in the St. Lawrence Valley."

"Why," he said, warming to his theme, "though it is yet a long way from completion, I believe that the work on the great dams and irrigation project in Arizona and New Mexico will stand as a perpetual monument to President Hammond's genius when all the more ephemeral things have passed away."

* * *

As had been anticipated, the most difficult problem confronting the new government was getting the states to accept the authority of Washington.

Rights Transferred

It was a long drawn-out struggle. Indeed, two years passed before Illinois, New Jersey and New York completely accepted the new order of things. The fundamental reason for President Hammond's ultimate success apparently lay in the fact that for more than a generation the states had been unwittingly transferring their individual rights, bit by bit, to the national government in return for special financial aids from the Treasury. The President simply was smart enough to press a tendency on to its logical conclusion.

The first step taken by the President to strengthen the authority of Washington was to appoint his federal representatives in each state. The next brought into being a Council of State.

This was composed of about a score of the best type of public men, including four women. Primarily it functioned as an advisory body and worked in close co-operation with the President and the cabinet. In the beginning the government's ordinances were issued without submission to the Council of State, but in a relatively short time the President made a regular practice of consulting the Council and in some instances deferred to its judgment to the extent of modifying and even dropping certain proposals. The council eventually came to approximate state representation at the capital.

The more recalcitrant State Legislatures were brought to terms by the power of the purse. Every state was poverty-stricken and their troubles were accentuated by unemployment. It was not long before financial necessity made them amenable to the authority of Washington.

Universal Procedure

An almost universal procedure was followed once acceptance of the jurisdiction of Washington under the decree of national emergency was agreed to by a state. The Legislature was adjourned sine die as Congress had been, and authority was vested in a council appointed by the Governor, subject to the President's approval. In some states the practical power of the President's special fiscal agent surpassed that of even the Governor and his council.

As in the case of the President's own appointments to his Cabinet and the Federal Council of State, the Governor's Council of each state was composed of men and women of a much higher type and capacity than had been produced by the normal course of elections.

In the larger municipalities there were greater difficulties, but here again crippled finances and unemployment compelled acquiescence in the appointment by the Governor of city managers free from the withering influence of local politics. In the Department of the Interior a Bureau of City Affairs was created which kept its fingers firmly on the activities of more than a thousand municipalities. Not one of these local reforms would have been possible had not President Hammond put himself solidly behind it and by repeated television appearances convinced the country of the worth of its adoption.

WHITE PIQUE MESS JACKET ADAPTED IN SMART COSTUMES

THE WHITE pique mess jacket of the navy uniform, worn by men at southern resorts in lieu of the usual formal tailcoat, has been adopted by smart women. Adopted and adapted to other uses than a companion to evening clothes. It appears in sports clothes and town costumes as well.

* * *

IN MATCHING woolens, it forms the jacket to go with spring skirts and dresses. In morocain and crepe de chine, it accompanies afternoon frocks. In pique and linen, it is used for sports clothes.

* * *

THE COSTUME in today's sketch uses pique not only for the mess jacket, but for the blouse beneath, adding the two to a woolen sports skirt. Both blouse and jacket have broadened shoulder yokes and straight sleeves that fasten at the wrists with cuff-buttons. The seams on the blouse are marked by double stitchings. The jacket, shorter than waist-length, fastens itself to the blouse via buttonholes and silver buttons.

* * *

THE ACCOMPANYING skirt, in navy blue, is horizontally striped with thin bandings of red and white. It hangs straight from the waist, without a belt, and leaves all provision for fullness to the plaited inserted band of navy blue at the left front.

Bryn Mawr Group Plans Benefit On April 17

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

A full scholarship to the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Women in Industry costs $350 for the two months of interesting study, wholesome recreation and other opportunities of association which it brings. To raise its usual scholarship, the Bryn Mawr Summer School Committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Elias Sunstein, a Bryn Mawr alumna, is completing its plans for a benefit bridge at the College Club on Monday, April 17.

Applications received by the committee have been more numerous this year than ever before, Mrs. Sunstein says. As an outgrowth of the summer school, the Bryn Mawr committee sponsors classes during the winter at the Turtle Creek Y. W. C. A. and at the South Side branch of the Carnegie Library. In Turtle Creek, Mrs. Paul Shupp conducts a course in English and Miss Marion Worthing teaches economics. Eugene Vinogradoff directs the South Side work.

The courses of study and the methods of instruction are so arranged as to develop self-expression, to create an understanding of industrial problems and to offer the girls a contrasting interest to the mechanical tasks which fill their daily lives.

Co-operating with the committee in the scholarship work is the Young Women's Christian Association, the American Association of University Women and the Bryn Mawr College Club.

Spinelessness and Laziness Keep People in Rut

If your life is shackled, who's to blame?

If you're old enough to hold a job and manage your own affairs, yet your family won't allow you to have "a speck of fun or a bit of liberty"—whose fault is it?

Vera thinks it's the family's fault. And she's mighty sorry for herself. Do you agree?

Dear Miss Robinson:

I have just had a quarrel and a serious talk at home, and I am bringing my problem to you. I earnestly beseech your advice about it.

I am in a rut. I go on, day after day, without the slightest variation. Of course, I know a lot of people's lives are patterned like that, but when, as in my case, you reach the age of 23, and haven't any men friends or the opportunity of meeting any, the future stretches out appallingly long and weary.

PAINFUL REMARKS

My mother keeps reminding me of the fact that I'm "not getting any younger," and at times passes painful remarks about my being undesirable to men. Other members of the family say things that hurt, too.

I try to be agreeable, but sometimes I have almost made up my mind to accept the first man who asks me to marry him, whether I like him or not, in an effort to keep the family appeased. Fate, however, seems to be against me, because I don't even get a chance like that. Yet, for this I am sometimes thankful when I hear of the many married couples of today who often don't stay married for more than six months at the most. When, and if, I do marry, I want my marriage to be lasting.

Recently I asked my mother if she would mind if I went to live at a hotel, or took a room with some family in a different part of the city. It was to be only an experiment, I explained, for, say, one to two months. I had some sort of an idea that perhaps my luck might change with new surroundings and I'd have something a little different to look forward to.

GIVES ALL HER MONEY

My suggestion was like throwing a bomb! I was told that if I ever left home I could never come back—that I must be thinking of "the Lord only knows what" to suggest such a thing!

Now, I do have a very good home, far above the average, really. And I doubt very much if I could live as well as I do on my salary if I went away from it, if I ever get so bold as to go.

I don't know if it's just a bluff or not, but at times I'm told to "pack and leave"—that it wouldn't make the slightest difference to anyone if I went. But since the folks get all my money, I have an idea it would make plenty of difference.

For six and a half years I've given them all my money, and now I'm told I "can never come back" because I ask a change. I am so blue! Please help me. What is the matter with everything? VERA.

What's the matter?

Your own spinelessness!

Hard words? Maybe, but they're true.

You're not in a rut because someone is holding you there. You're in a rut because you haven't the spunk to climb out.

We're all in ruts, Vera. We're born in them, and we stay in them until we die, unless we deliberately conquer our own fear and laziness and the other fellow's peevishness—and get going.

"But why should the other fellow be peevish?" you ask. "Why should families object if one of their members wants to strike out for herself?"

REACH OUT FOR LIFE

That's easy. When a bunch of people are jammed in a rut, everyone's comfort is disturbed if one of the bunch moves. And that's particularly true of older people. Your mother has based much of her comfort on you. She enjoys using your money. She enjoys your doing domestic chores. And she particularly enjoys nagging and bossing you.

Of course, she'd deny that. Nevertheless, nagging supplies mothers with an excitement which is otherwise missing in humdrum domestic lives, and bossing gives them a sense of importance which most mothers dearly desire. As a result your life's a mess!

But that's not mother's fault; it's yours, Vera. Your life doesn't belong to your family after you are of age. It belongs to you, to develop and protect. And if you won't be loyal to yourself, you deserve all the bad luck that comes your way.

So stop being sorry for yourself, and get busy. Stop giving mother all your money. Tell her that she'll treat you white or you'll move—and mean it.

Also get yourself some new clothes, a new haircut—and some friends. No, I don't mean that you should begin running wild. Find yourself some nice, jolly girl friends. They'll know plenty of fine fellows.

Find out what is going on in your world, and learn to think about it and talk about it. Come out of your shell. Reach out for life and life will reach out for you.

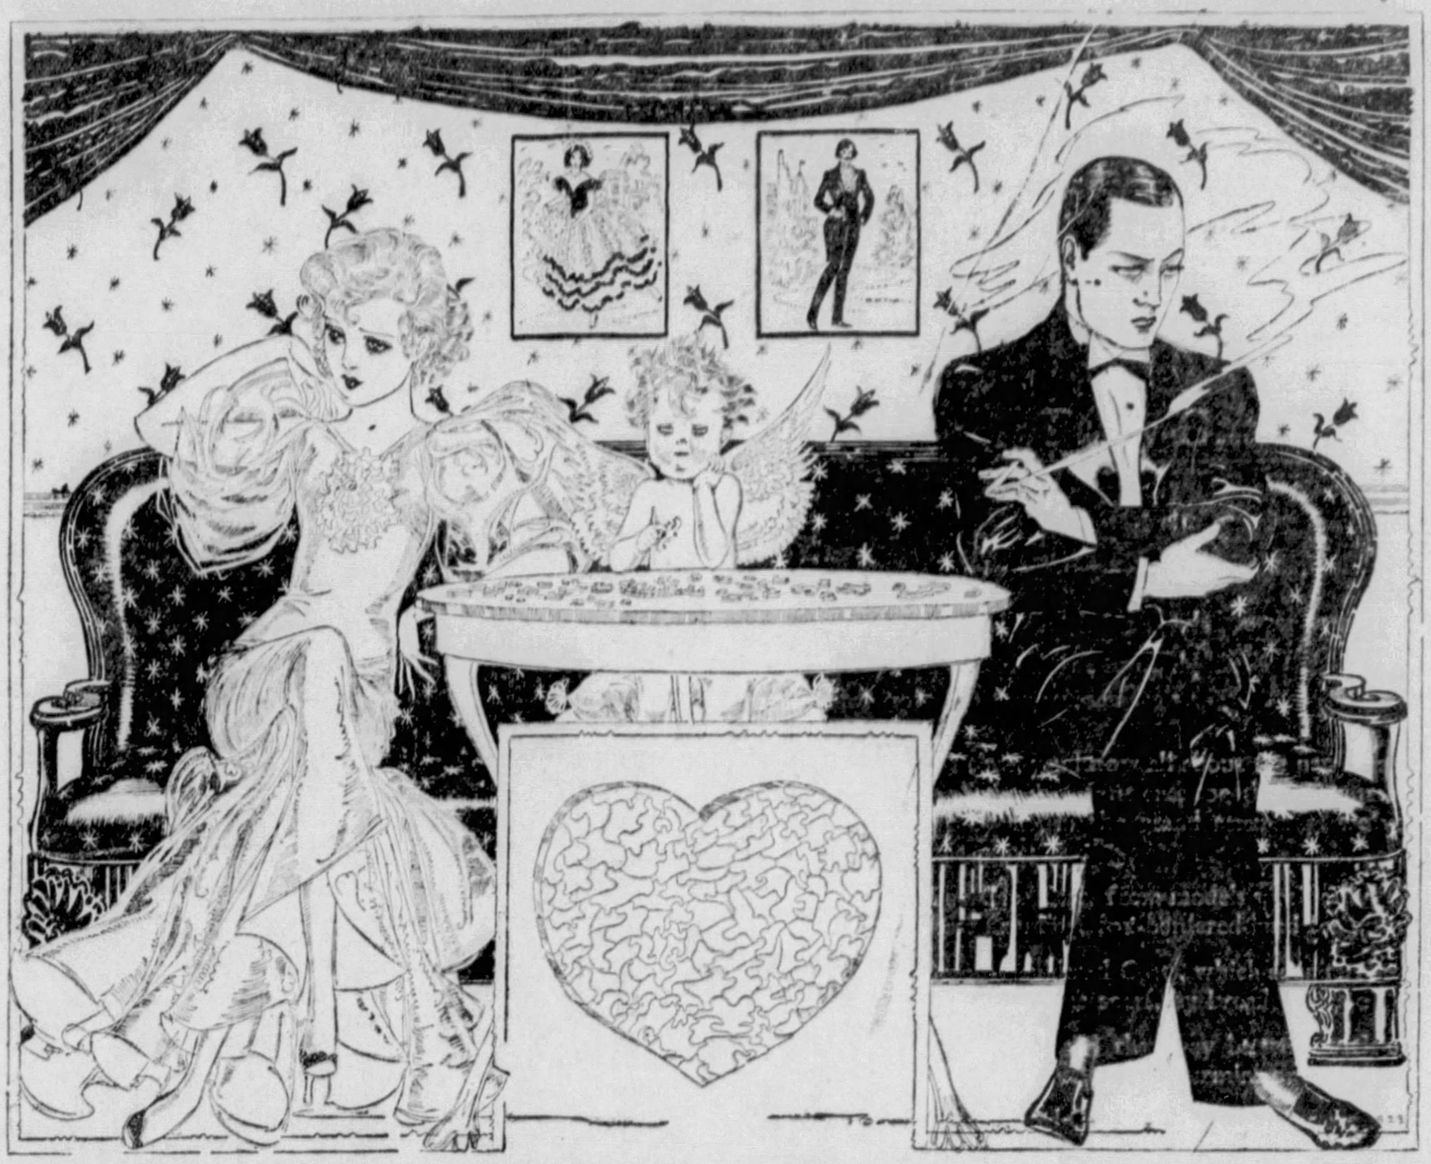
NOT NEW TO LOVE

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



These are not new to love—jig saw puzzles! The job of putting the famous one, a "Heart in Pieces," together has kept him up 'til many an anguished dawn down the ages. When the medieval milk man came 'round he found the lamp of Eros burning palely over broken hearts then—as now, and as it did ages before that.

The "Heart in Pieces" that once was two then became one, and now is scattered in confusion. Sometimes he slips it back into place before the midnight snack. But many times, alack, it's a hard one, that will not match; he's sure some of the pieces are lost, or some other picture is mixed up with it, and struggles valiantly 'til he "can no more," and puts it sadly away—forever jumbled. More often the heart puzzles are like that. Love put them together; and only he can get them back; and sometimes not even himself can do it.

The dust gathers on the box put away. Two people go their ways apart, and at last Love himself forgets all about that particular picture.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

At a Theater

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Will you please tell me the proper way for two couples to sit in a theater. Should it be boy, girl, girl, boy; or boy, girl, boy, girl? It should never be boy, boy, girl, girl, should it?

2—When walking down the isle, does each young man walk before his own friend, or is it the young men first and last and the girls in between?

3—Will you please tell me if two young men, each walking alone along the street, tip their hats to one another upon recognition? I know when one young man is accompanied by a girl then the lone man tips his hat in respect to the lady. . . . am I right? APPLES.

1—Your first suggestions of the seating order is the best one, and the usual one . . . boy, girl, girl boy.

And to the last part of this question . . . no, it should never be boy, boy, girl, girl.

2—A very good, because very convenient, way for a group of two couples to go down the aisle in a theater is for one of the men to go first, to give the ticket stubs to the usher and to see that the right seats are found; then the two girls, and last the other man.

3—Usually two men, walking alone, do not raise their hats to each other. The exception is young men who may still abide by a custom of the country from which they came, for this is the custom in some foreign countries. Especially is it the custom when one or both are paying compliment to a distinction or "honored position." Older men abroad often do this.

You are right about the other part of your question . . . that a man walking alone takes off his hat when he bows to a man walking with a woman, whether or not he knows the woman.

(And do you mind, please, if I make another suggestion? It is better never to say, "tips his hat." Instead say, "raises his hat," or "takes off his hat.")

Eating Olives

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me if it is proper to eat olives with the fingers or with a fork? At a recent dinner olives were served in a bowl with regular forks and spoons at one's disposal.

One person put a few of the olives on his plate and stuck the large fork into one at a time and then put the entire olive in his mouth. When he finished he rolled the stone out on the fork and put it on his plate. Another person picked up the olive from his dish with his fingers and ate a little of it at a time, not putting the stone in his mouth at any time, and when he finished he put it on his plate with his fingers. J.

We should eat olives the way the latter person ate his. That is, we use the serving-piece in the olive dish to take the olive or olives to our bread and butter plate. Then we take an olive in our fingers, take small mouthfuls of it . . . what we really do is nibble it . . . and then, when we have finished, we put the pit on the side of our bread and butter plate, or dinner plate, if there is no bread and butter plate. At no time do we put the entire olive in our mouth, to suck it in the unattractive way we unfortunately, see so many people do.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

Ronald Tells Rescuers of a Strange Premonition

I could not repress a shiver as Hugh Grantland gave the instructions to Brock for the attack upon the farmhouse, where Marion and Carolyn were imprisoned. There was a cool deadliness about these instructions that presaged ill for anyone opposing the men bent upon the rescue.

True, he had given no instructions for murderous weapons. The men gathered ready for the attack were to "silence" the sentinels, but I knew that he meant just that, and no more. The weapons to be wielded by the attackers were axes and sledge hammers for the doors and windows, and tear gas bombs for anyone resisting the entry of the rescuers.

We knew that, at the noise of Dicky's plane passing over the house, Marion and Carolyn, in accordance with the code note Marion's cleverness had caused her mother to receive, would barricade their door and window and lie down on the floor in corners, where there would be the least chance of being hit by bullets if there were gun fire. With danger to them thus eliminated, the rescuers would not be hampered in their attack, and I felt confident that Hugh was justified in his belief that the whole thing would be over in five minutes.

MADGE FRIGHTENED

And yet there were so many things which could happen at the last minute. Suppose Hugh was mistaken about those doors and windows of the farmhouse? Suppose that, in accordance with the accounts of the customs of bandit warfare, those doors were of iron and the windows impregnably barred? What price axes and sledge hammers then? And even if they did manage to smash them, the kidnapers would be warned—and armed.

My imagination traveled even farther. Suppose the girls were not able to carry out their plan of barricading their room? Marion in her code note had seemed sure that they would be left alone after supper until bedtime, and that if Dicky and the men on the ground arrived early enough there would be no obstacle to her plan of barring their door and window with the furniture of the room in which they were imprisoned.

But I could think of a dozen things which might happen to upset her plan. And if they did not succeed in barricading themselves, or if the rescuers were delayed in getting into the house, I knew, from dread tales of gangsters' ways, that the rescuers might reach the girls only to find them slain.

So absorbed was I in my own tremors that I did not hear Brock's reply to Hugh. I awoke to what was going on around me only when Harry Underwood struck into the conversation.

RONALD EXPLAINS

"You sure have everything covered. Now, all we have to do is to wait for the noise of the Dickybird's ship. Not so?"

"That is right," Hugh said.

"Then can't we take a minute or two off and give this lad the chance to tell us why he was trailing us when he was supposed to be at the hotel?"

There was a hint of sternness in Harry's voice. I knew it was the reaction of an older man toward what he considered the desertion of a post by a younger one. That Ronald caught it, I knew by the way his head went back and his whole body stiffened.

"Honestly, sir, I didn't leave my mother until Mrs. Underwood said there was no use staying if I felt I must get out here. You see, the doctor had to give my mother a powerful hypodermic after you left, and he said she wouldn't wake up until morning; so Mrs. Underwood said there was no possible need of two people staying."

He drew a deep breath, as if gathering courage, and then rushed on.

"I didn't tell Mrs. Underwood the real reason why I felt as if I'd die if I didn't get out here," the boyish voice went on. "I was afraid I would frighten her. But about 10 minutes before I left the queerest feeling came over me. I just felt as if I could hear Marion's voice calling me, 'Ronald! Help me.' It was just as plain as if she had been in the same room with me."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Danger of "Lockjaw" in Neglected Wounds

About 20 years ago the American Medical Association first launched its attack against the dangers of fireworks and pleaded for a safe and sane Fourth of July. Many of my readers undoubtedly recall the many tragedies and accidents which used to occur on this day of celebration.

Dr. Copeland

As a result of the combined efforts made by the American Medical Association and the National Safety Council, July Fourth has now become much safer. In many states the sale of explosives and firecrackers is prohibited.

One of the most terrifying and feared diseases, not infrequently traced to injuries caused by firecrackers, is a disease called "tetanus." Tetanus, or "lockjaw," is caused by a certain type of germ which is commonly found in the earth and in decaying materials. When firecrackers scorch or burn the skin, the surface is broken, permitting the tetanus germ to enter the body.

When it is known that an individual has been exposed to tetanus, immediate steps should be taken to prevent this disease. This can be accomplished by the administration of "tetanus antitoxin."

Unfortunately, most of us are negligent, perhaps not realizing how serious a trifling injury received from a firecracker may be. To guard against the danger, the anti-toxin should be given immediately after the injury has occurred. When delayed or neglected, fatal lockjaw may occur.

Lockjaw may result from injuries other than those received from firecrackers. The disease may follow lacerations and abrasions where dirt, splinters or clothing which carry the dreaded germ, are driven into the skin. To protect against this, the giving of tetanus anti-toxin is now a routine treatment in the emergency rooms of all general hospitals.

The first sign of lockjaw is a slight stiffness of the neck. This may occur from one day to four weeks after the accident. Chewing food and talking become difficult. Gradually the muscles of the face become affected. Pretty soon the jaws are set and difficult to open.

If tetanus anti-toxin has not been given, its use should not be delayed any longer. Unfortunately, if the anti-toxin is not available, the disease may be fatal.

Never neglect a wound or abrasion of the skin. Cases of lockjaw have resulted from the most trifling injuries. A scratch from a rusty nail is dangerous and should never be disregarded. In addition to careful cleansing of the wound, consult with your doctor, who will give you the protecting injection if he considers it advisable.

May I warn you again about the dangers of firecrackers and explosives. It is hoped that in this coming July the number of accidents and permanent injuries resulting from explosives will be less than ever before.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

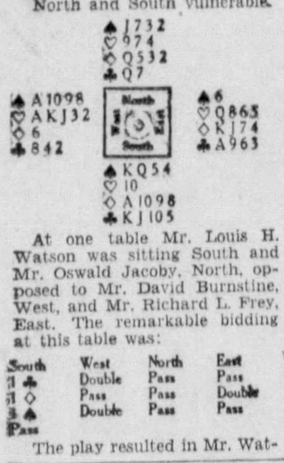
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Hope for Average Players

Unquestionably there is something that marks the expert and sets him apart from those who are still more or less in the tyro class at the Bridge table. This is one reason why Bridge players like to see what experts do in critical bidding situations—generally to pause and admire, but occasionally, as in the hand below, to wonder what makes the expert and whether sometimes it has not been more luck than skill that has brought tournament renown. The hand was played in a recent championship match between a team-of-four representing a famous club and another prominent team captained by Mr. David Burnstine.

South—Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



At one table Mr. Louis H. Watson was sitting South and Mr. Oswald Jacoby, North, opposed to Mr. David Burnstine, West, and Mr. Richard L. Frey, East. The remarkable bidding at this table was:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Double	Pass	Pass
1 ◇	Pass	Pass	Double
3 ♠	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

The play resulted in Mr. Watson not only making his contract of one spade doubled, but 2 overtricks as well—certainly a most fortunate result with the cards held by North and South.

In the other room, where Mr. Theodore A. Lightner and Mr. Michael T. Gottlieb held the East and West hands, East and West reached a contract of four hearts redoubled, which was made laid down.

There is no doubt that the average player is inclined to double too little, but, as between taking an undoubled penalty and presenting your opponents with overtricks, the choice should not be hard to make. It is much better to be content with 50 points as a penalty to defeat the contract than it is to present the opponents with hundreds as a result of overtricks. It is also true that paltry penalties should not be accepted in lieu of game, and this is doubly true when even such penalties fail to materialize.

Today's Question

What is the correct response to an Opening call of one club, holding the following hand, with no intervening bid?

♠ A K J 9 ♡ K 10 8 2 ◇ Q J 10 9 ♣ 10

Answer: One spade. A Forcing Takeout should not be made because the hand contains but 3 honor-tricks and a singleton in partner's suit, and might result in a losing Slam contract.

Working for Education

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

It was four years ago, when the lad's father was wealthy, said the lad: "Gee! I suppose I'll have to go to college when I finish high school." A casual but interested, "Why?" elicited the reply, "Oh, because dad says I have to." A sigh, then a brightening of the boyish eyes, "But anyhow I'll get to play football, maybe."

Four years ago, college to this lad, and probably many more, was just one of those things a fellow had to go through patiently, like measles and spring examinations. Yet, yesterday, the same lad informed me, not without pride, that since the family fortune had taken on midget size, he intended to work his way through college. And he is eagerly looking forward to it.

Just one more good thing that has emerged from the troubled years we've recently put behind us.

And I take it, my young friend isn't the only boy who has suddenly discovered that he wants education and more education. For, according to reports from the National Bureau of Education a large percentage of the female students are now earning most of their expenses while taking college courses.

That means, to me at least, that those colleges are going to turn out a bumper crop of thinking men and women, a harvest of human beings who appreciate an education and who, having worked hard for it, will turn it to some good purpose.

Since higher education has become prohibitive, quite naturally, it is the one thing the young people desire. And if it took that to rouse a desire for more eductaion, it will have been truly worth it. If, through economic conditions, the younger generation has learned that it is no disgrace to work for a coveted goal, it has assimilated something that the generation which preceded it never had the good fortune to know.

Household Hints

Mud stains on dresses can be removed by rubbing with a raw potato.

Potatoes bake more quickly and are more palatable if allowed to soak for a few minutes in hot water before being put in the oven.

Try roasting a beetroot in the oven instead of boiling it and note how much nicer is the flavor. It should then be peeled in the usual way.

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENT NARROW

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP.)—The stock market was quiet and narrowly irregular in the early trading today.

Homestake Mining rose 4 points on its opening sale, but other gold mining shares were quiet. Industrials were mixed.

United States Steel, Allied Chemical, General Motors, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Montgomery Ward ruled about steady. American Telephone, Public Service of New Jersey and Louisville and Nashville were slightly higher while fractional recessions occurred in Corn Products, Goodyear, Union Pacific, Standard Oil of California and Drug.

Wall street was keenly interested in the administration's proposed banking reform bill, providing, among other things, federal insurance of bank deposits. The financial community has been traditionally opposed to bank deposit guaranty, but some quarters saw merit in the present proposal in that it would tend to bring all banks into the Reserve System.

Passing of the first day of legal beer found the business district gratified with reports of a pick-up in many lines of trade, attributed to increased employment by breweries and allied manufacturers. The country's response to the legal brew was vastly greater than expected, and such reports did much to counteract the poor statistics shown by the railroad industry for the month of February when net operating income was 54½ per cent below February a year ago.

Foreign exchanges opened practically unchanged. Sterling was $3.41 13-16, a decline of 3-16 of a cent, and francs stood at 3.93¼ cents, unchanged.

CAR LOADINGS UP 18,738

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP.)—The American Railway Association announced today that loadings of revenue freight for the week ended April 1 were 494,588 cars, an increase of 18,738 over the preceding week but 50,373 under the same week in 1932.

Miscellaneous freight loadings during the week of April 1 was 178,234 cars, an increase of 13,371 over the preceding week but 17,211 under 1932; less than car lot merchandise 159,236, increase 4,260 over the preceding week but 27,253 below last year; grain and grain products 34,119, increase 2,919 and 4,943; forest products 17,059, increase 1,342 over the preceding week but 2,127 under last year; ore 2,654, increase 405 and 471; coal 87,650, decrease 2,908 and 7,131; coke, 3,713, decrease 450 and 695; livestock 14,833, decrease 201 and 1,370.

Business was moderately active at the start with orders evenly divided, but the disposition to take profits after the recent sharp advances was in evidence and prices eased slightly during the early trading. The market showed net losses of 3 to 5 points at the end of the first half hour.

LIVERPOOL, April 8.—Cotton—Receipts, 1,300 bales, all American; spot quiet; prices unchanged; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 6.03; good middling, 5.73; strict middling, 5.43; middling, 5.28; strict low middling, 5.08; low middling, 4.93; strict good ordinary, 4.73; good ordinary, 4.43. ECONOMIC LAWS ON PRODUCTION DISCUSSED

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, April 9.—We have seen that there are four fundamental "factors of production," land, labor, capital, enterprise.

If we remember that "land" includes all natural resources (soil, climate, location), and "capital" all produced instruments of production (plant, equipment, mercantile stocks), we can see that all production requires these factors.

For example, the storekeeper uses a location, and a building and stock of goods. He employs labor and works himself. He runs the risks of his enterprise, managing it with more or less skill.

RESULTS IMPORTANT

This analysis of the factors of production is important.

In the first place, it makes us think about the essential elements in all production. It does not make so much difference how much money is paid for the factors of production, or what their "book value" is, as how much land, labor, capital and enterprise we have, and how much they are "producing."

Furthermore, no matter who owns the land and capital, or employs the laborers, or runs the business risks (whether it be the Russian state or American individuals), there are distinct problems concerning each factor. We speak of "the land problem" and "the labor problem." There are problems of saving and investment (capital), and of "management."

On the supply side, each of these factors is distinct, and each has its peculiar costs or scarcities.

ORGANIZATION PROBLEM

In the second place, there is the big problem of their most effective organization for production. Here we come to important economic laws:

1—The law of "balance," or most productive proportion among the factors of production, states that, at any given time, there is a certain combination of the factors of production which gives the maximum net return. This is the basis of economic efficiency. The chief problem of management is to get this balance.

For example, when we see a tall building which does not pay, we know that too much capital has been combined with the land in which it stands. Or when we see a "land-poor" farmer, who has not enough capital or labor, we say he has too much land.

It is often a problem whether to use more labor and less machinery (capital), or less labor and more machinery.

OVERDEVELOPMENT SEEN

Two of the problems of these times are: (1) The excessive application of capital to land—overbuilding, overdevelopment; (2) the excessive size and complexity of business undertaken by "enterprises." Our overgrown industrial, railway and financial concerns mean too much land, labor and capital in proportion to "enterprise"—too much for the "business leaders."

It follows from the law of balance in production that, if the supply of any one factor is limited and the supplies of the other factors are increased, the net returns must sooner or later diminish. Or, other things remaining equal, if we increase the supply of any one factor, the time will come when the output in proportion to that factor will decline.

This is the law of diminishing productivity. It means that any departure from a certain most efficient combination of factors brings a diminishing net product.

But, you ask, how can one know how to get the most productive combination? The rule is clear. Each factor should be used up to the point where the least productive "unit" of it (acre, laborers, machine, etc.) just pays.

Add building stories till vacancies or low rentals say stop. Add laborers till additional men mean difficulty in meeting payrolls. Add plant, equipment and labor force to the enterprise until business losses show that the business is too big for the business man.

The economist rule is:

"Use each factor so that the marginal productivity of all will be equal."

Of course, this balancing process is affected by the relative abundance of the several factors and their costs. If land is scarce, we may get the best balance by putting more labor and capital on it. If labor is scarce (or relatively high-priced) we substitute capital in the shape of labor-saving machinery. That is the principal of substitution in production.

We at once see how important it is that each factor be priced according to its productivity. If wages, or land rent, or interest be out of line, the use of the corresponding factor must tend to decline.

BEER'S RETURN HELD STEP TO RECOVERY

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER,
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, April 8.—As a people we can scarcely hope to ride to prosperity solely on a wave of foam, though the legalization of beer (which in effect creates a new industry) is a step in the right direction.

Richard T. Ely, whose text book on economics was sold to 1,000,000 persons, has essayed to appraise the economic significance of the new Roosevelt policies.

Mr. Rukeyser

The veteran economist concludes:

"The Roosevelt policies are realistic in striving to handle within our own boundaries the problems of farm surpluses by readjusting domestic production; this regardless of whether or not the present plans are the best possible.

"The Roosevelt policies are realistic likewise in striving to bring about openings for our products by negotiation, searching here and there for a reciprocal advantage. Any wholesale tariff reform, such as a horizontal reduction of 20 per cent, would deepen the distress of our own producers, many of whom are now holding on by the skin of their teeth. The time for such a reform is not in a depression."

Answering the argument of the happily forgotten technocrats about the lack of need for manpower, Dr. Ely, in the Town Crier, says:

"There is nothing like an adequate supply in social services, education, health protection and improving generally the foundations of our economic and social life. The difficulty is found in the adjustments in the short run. The only method that has been suggested for carrying us over this short run into a wholesale long run is the peace-time army, which I have continually advocated. A step in this direction is what the new administration calls the civilian conservation corps. If a world war should break out all of us would have jobs and wages would be high. But, as President Roosevelt has said, we are in the midst of a war worse than this country has ever known. If we have the intelligence and will to use appropriate means to conduct a war, why can we not organize a peacetime army of reconstruction and provide a job for every one. We can!"

Apparently the demand for men with special training in business management continues throughout the depression. Deane W. Malott, of the Harvard graduate school of business administration, which will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary next week, told me that 90 per cent of the members of the last graduate class are employed. He also said that out of 5,600 graduates since the school was started, only 200 are known to be among the unemployed. Incidentally, the school is offering special training for idle men, enabling them to learn instead of loaf.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Orchids and Scallions

(With W. W. the Target)

"Variety's recording of a 'no opinion' in the New York dramatic critics' box-score has again been challenged, this time by Walter Winchell. Obviously, the method for arriving at conclusions in the reading of legit reviews needs clarifying once more.

"A 'no opinion' is an evasion, in one way or another. It means failure of the reviewer to express himself clearly and without doubt as to his opinion of the box-office chances of the show. Reviews which through contradictory statements fail to deliver one definite opinion are set down as 'no opinions.' Likewise criticisms that confuse the reader who seeks a clear appraisal of the show in question.

"The 'no opinion' called on Winchell was for his review of 'Pigeons and People.' The conclusion of his notice read, in part, 'It is my idea of a hit show. I mean, I think, the show merits success—but I wouldn't make a large bet that it will have it.'"—Variety.

The box-score keeper is a humorist. That's just as true as his misquotation on the ending of our review on that show. There was no evasion of our opinion on that grand play. One of Sime's stupids, it seems to us, is the one who is evading the facts. The exact ending of that notice read: " . . . but I wouldn't make a large bet that it will have it. Because there are no intermissions, you see, and so we critics couldn't get together in the foyer (lobby to dopes) to talk it over, as the legend would have you believe we always do."

In case we haven't made ourselves clear—here's what we said: "—but I wouldn't make a large bet that it will have it. Because there are no intermissions, you see, and so we critics couldn't get together in the foyer to talk it over, as the legend would have you believe we always do." Catch on?

A scallion to the Camden (N. J.) Courier-Post, our paper there, for not informing us about the imposter who was arrested in Camden over a week ago. The Camden paper probably believes that we know everything, as the promotion department deceives people into believing.

At any rate, if it weren't for an anonymous reader from Camden we wouldn't have known it, at all. (Cross our heart!) However, the reader sent a clipping which relates that a Charles Eberstadt, 24, of 65 Prospect street, Providence, R. I., was arrested there for attempting to fleece a Western Union manager.

* * *

We phoned the Camden Police Department to thank them, particularly the talented Benjamin Simon, a detective, whose trickery stumped Eberstadt, who, apparently, isn't as clever at obtaining money under false pretense—as we are.

Eberstadt got four months in the hoosegow there, for which hurray. He might be the same imposter who left a pretty trail behind him in Buffalo, Newark and other cities—representing himself as the editor of this column—or an ambassador of it. When newspapermen queried: "Are you the same W. W. who is on the radio?" the faker replied away saying: "Guess." The papers then retaliated: "Winchell Here! Does a Garbo!" . . . Eberstadt may also be the "great lover" who has deceived sappy women in many burgs.

We will be in Camden as soon as we can find out. Maybe the evidence will keep him jailed—from now on.

Murders Two Guess Who In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

That good old game, Find the Killer, is played adeptly in "The Crime of the Century" at the Penn Theater this week. Although there's a parade of shadowgraphs at the opening of the mystery film, and the clock ticks off 60 seconds in the middle of the story while you see a parade of all the characters, so you can pick the guilty one, it is not likely that any one guessed the assassin, who does not even shrink from killing lovely Wynne Gibson and trying to fasten that crime on kindly Jean Hersholt.

Mr. Seibel

The only rule to guide the guesser is the well-known principle that one the least open to suspicion is the most likely to be the murderer. There are so many clues, from a deck of cards and a police badge to a glove with lipstick on it and a triple scratch on a woman's hand, that you are hopelessly bewildered. Since Doctor Hersholt came in at the beginning, and asked the police to look him up, because he was going to commit a murder, he cannot complain that he is grilled and grueled before the mystery gets itself solved.

It's not a very plausible plot, but it is well put together and moves swiftly enough to keep you from thinking as well as guessing. Only a smart reporter like Stuart Erwin would solve it, being in love with charming Frances Dee.

"Roosevelt, the Man of the Hour," a picture life of F. D. R., is the other important feature, along with a fine travelogue about Rio de Janeiro and a thrilling Mickey Mouse travesty of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

New Cutie on Screen

JEAN PARKER IS A SLENDER LITTLE YOUNG UN' WHO HAS BEEN SEEN IN SEVERAL RECENT M-G-M PICTURES

Tars at Play Feature in Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Sailor's Luck," Stanley screen attraction that features James Dunn and Sally Eilers, is a combination of farce, burlesque and rough-and-ready comedy that get mixed up with a romantic theme that is treated just seriously enough to intermix a little sentiment with the other ingredients. At times it is swift in action and at other times it is draggy, but there are numerous occasions for laughs.

It is all about the adventures of sailors of a U. S. Naval vessel ashore. Dunn, Sammy Cohen and Frank Moran are pals and when they step out there is generally something stirring. On one of their excusions they meet Miss Eilers, and Dunn claims her as his own. When she loses her job, he supplies her with a room in a place run by a man who is a racketeer, among other things, and who regards women as his natural prey. And that's the way he looks at Sally. When she rebuffs him, he manages to make her look bad in the eyes of Dunn, and the result is an interrupted romance that is made o. k. when all mistakes are straightened out.

That, however, calls for the assistance of the U. S. "fleet" and there is a merry battle between the tars and a gang of plug-uglies, resulting in the wrecking of dance hall when Dunn goes to remove Sally from a marathon conducted by Mr. Racketeer Landlord.

There isn't much in the heart-throb line in it. Dunn is a brusque Romeo whose self-assurance and happy-go-lucky ways carry out the "sweetheart-in-every-port" idea that is traditional of men of the sea. Miss Eilers makes her heroine role casual and matter-of-fact, pleasingly non-sentimental.

Sammy Cohen's clowning accounts for most of the laughs. A drunk, played by Will Stanton, also is funny, but misses by doing too much. Victor Jory gives an excellent characterization of the unprincipled landlord. Buster Phelps, child actor, adds a touch of "cuteness."

Thrill Films In Davis

By WILLIAM T. SCHOYER

Joan Blondell is a woman racketeer who finds the game doesn't pay when romance steps in, in "Blondie Johnson," gangster film in the Davis and Sheridan Square. Chester Morris plays the dumb mob man whom she lifts, with herself, from the gutter to riches—and a broken heart.

Not over-stressing the sentiment, Joan keeps her charm and sets the pace for the fast-moving, hardboiled story. From Allen Jenkins there are plenty of wisecracks. And there's plenty of earnest excitement and shooting while, in spite of Chester's "cheating" and too much money, true love fights through to a nearly happy ending.

An often powerful simplicity marks the co-feature, "Destination Unknown," as well as the fine performances of Pat O'Brien, as a ruthless rum-runner, and Alan Hale, as a savage bo'sun. Five thousand cases of bootleg liquor—and no water, 12 desperate men with two willing to snap the thin chance of all their lives for power, a woman stowaway—all on a becalmed and sinking ship—provide a weird situation for this tense drama of adventure. Excitement piles thick until the climax, when a stranger with the lamp in his hand appears at the death revel among the broken whisky bottles. Ralph Bellamy handles a difficult allegorical role easily, while Betty Compson and the crew of crazed sailors all do a convincing job.

Dempsey Has A Sweet Tenor, But for What?

—By ARTHUR BUGS BAER—

Now that Milwaukee is famous again how about passing some laws against those cone-shaped glasses? We don't like big collars on little necks.

We sang over Station WINS with Jack Dempsey, George McManus and Russ Westover. That Dempsey is a real barroom tenor. The writer is a sawdust baritone. Jack sang on the top rope while we took care of the floor.

In case you couldn't tell by the words and music, Jack sang "Sweet Adeline" without permission of the United States Patent Office.

If you didn't hear the old champion sing you can tell your ma that you won. Jack has a sweet voice and somebody will figure out a use for it yet.

We are glad the nation took its beverage gracefully and mildly. It has boomed business. The man who runs the wagon lunch on our corner is thinking of putting on two baggage cars, a smoker and a Pullman.

Tracy Soldier In Warner

By MARY SHINE

It's another army story in the Warner this week, "Private Jones." But, as Ed Wynn says, this one is "diff'runt" because it stars Lee Tracy. The most misunderstood man in the army, that's his story and how he sticks to it.

A fighting bantam with a hair-trigger temper who can't understand why he must obey his commanding officer, what the war is all about, why he hasn't flat feet to keep him out of it, and consequently spends most of his time on K. P. That's all.

Private Jones says he approved of the Civil War and the Revolutionary War, when people fought in their own back yards, but why go to Germany to fight someone he doesn't even know!

Donald Cook, as Lieut. Gregg, in charge of Jones' company, thinks the long-suffering private is yellow, and what Jones thinks of the lieutenant isn't exactly mentioned, except that he can't understand why Gloria Stuart could have married him with men like Private William Jones in the army.

But the peppery private wins his medal just the same, after an exciting skirmish in which he and Gregg are captured by the enemy—only nobody believes it. When he is last seen back peeling potatoes for the camp cook, you know it is nothing very serious — Private Jones has only been disobeying orders again.

The Men's Glee Club of the University of Pittsburgh gave its home concert in Carnegie Music Hall last night before an admiring school audience and friends.

Mr. Lissfelt

How encouraging it is for the cause of good music to hear these young fellows devote themselves to such music as presented last night! Patriotic songs, school songs, and some light opera choruses found their way among music of Haydn, Arcadelt and Scarlatti to name but a few of the great composers on the program.

This glee club now sings with far more restraint than formerly. It might have influence of lessening the tone volume for the present, but it has already refined the music to a great extent. The audience must have noticed the excellent diction, too, for such happy songs as Sullivan's would be out of running were it not for the charm of their nonsense rhymes which we clearly hear and comprehend from this body of singers.

The quartet from the club, Berlin, Holland, Lytle and Hemans, did a nice turn with Henry Hadley's amusing Hong Kong Romance especially, but no one should ever be guilty of arranging a song like Robert Schumann's "Thou Art Like a Flower" for quartet, sung as encore.

Esther Pugh Wright made a good impression in a group of organ solo works. Accompanists were Robert K. McConnell, Forrest Henrici Alter and J. W. Linsenbigler. Dr. W. H. Wright is to be commended for his directing.

Harlow, Gable Teamed

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, April 8.—Love interest that sizzles is promised for an untitled picture Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is rushing into production, with Jean Harlow playing a torch-singer and Clark Gable her prize-fighter lover.

This is the story Frances Marion has been working on, but studio officials deny it is the old "Prize Fighter and the Lady," for which Norma Shearer and Joan Crawford previously have been mentioned. The new scenario will have special dialogue by John Mahin, one of the smarter young writers of Hollywood.

You'll be asking, of course, "Can Jean Harlow sing?"

I don't know that she can—at least not well enough to make a career of it—but then neither can a lot of professional torch singers.

This will be a problem for the man in the sound booth, anyway. What M-G-M wants is a pair of colorful characters for its two high-temperature lovers, and here they have it.

Howard Hawks will supervise the new film. He expects to begin work in about 10 days.

* * *

A letter from Patsy Ruth Miller tells that she is still in London. She has not joined Tay Garnett, because the Swiss location for "S. O. S. Iceberg" has showed a temperature of about 10 degrees below zero. She and Tay will meet in Berlin when he has finished these scenes of the picture . . . Gloria Stuart expects to leave soon for Guadalajara, Mexico. It will be her first vacation in 12 pictures . . . Apparently, Nancy Carroll will not take her trip immediately. Saw her lunching at a Hollywood rendezvous, and she says she may go to New York but not to Europe.

* * *

If Mary Pickford does "Peter Pan" she will break away from tradition and use a real dog to play the part of Nana, the children's nurse. By the use of trick sound effects, the dog will be given a deep bass voice. The star also has plans to utilize the full flexibility of the camera.

City Gains Honors In Fire Waste Test

The grand award was received by Philadelphia, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington.

'Mussolini Speaks' Here Easter Week

The Variety will be dark Holy Week, and will reopen with the Sunday midnight show, April 16, with the presentation of "Mussolini Speaks." This is claimed to be one of the greatest motion pictures made. It is a complete and authentic history of the life of Il Duce. Its premiere in New York recently was attended by members of the Italian diplomatic corps. Among the scenes are Mussolini and his army of Black Shirts in their march on Rome, his visit to Vatican City and one in which more than 700,000 men, women and children appear.

A resolution declaring opposition to the St. Lawrence treaty was sent by the Propeller Club of Pittsburgh to Senators David A. Reed and James J. Davis in Washington yesterday. It urged the Senate to vote against the treaty's ratification.

Cornell Club Host To Russians Tonight

Six young Communists, sent by the Soviet government to study electrical engineering at Cornell University, will be guests of the Cornell Club of Western Pennsylvania at a buffet supper and beer party in the Hotel Schenley tonight. The club will be host to Pittsburgh undergraduates of Cornell.

The Russians have been inspecting manufacturing and technical firms in this district. They are part of a group of 70 engineers sent by the Soviet government to study in American universities.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., April 8.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Well, I can't speak with any authority on the condition of the country today, for I haven't sampled a single glass of the "Spirit of Rejuvenated America." I have always claimed America didn't want a drink as bad as they wanted the right to take a drink if they did happen to want one.

Will Rogers

And say, did you see what the Senate voted for? A week's work to consist of 30 hours, six hours a day, for five days. I doubt very much if the people working will agree to an increase in time of work like that. We stick to the old American principle of only working when the boss is looking.

Yours, WILL.

Akron Shown On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The greatest disaster in the history of aviation, the loss of the dirigible Akron, the world's mightiest airship, is graphically outlined pictorially in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. There are many scenes of the ill-fated Queen of the air. Then come scenes of the second tragedy, the wreck of the Navy blimp J-3, as the tiny airship started from the Akron's hangar on the morning of the big ship's loss, then scenes of her wreckage lying in the sea off Beachaven. The Globe Trotter gives a vivid description of the two disasters.

Commander Wiley, executive officer of the Akron, and the two rescued members of the crew, Deal and Irwin, are shown arriving at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Speaking for the three of them, the executive officer gives a dramatic description of the events on board the Akron before and after the crash.

The end of the dry era is pictured as breweries start to make deliveries of legalized beer in various parts of the country. Jimmy (Schnozzle) Durante, through Hearst Metrotone News, gives a "happy brew year" greeting.

Ten thousand race fans go wild with excitement as Gallant Sir wins the famous Agua Caliente Handicap with its $24,000 prize.

Steelhead salmon are shown making prodigious leaps over waterfalls as they travel to their spawning grounds.

From Valencia, Spain, come pictures of the celebration of the Festival of St. Jose.

(Because of the necessity upon theater managers to arrange programs to time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.)

FEARS SCHOOL BREAKDOWN

A breakdown of Pennsylvania's educational structure by Legislative action was predicted by Mrs. John M. Phillips last night. Just back from Harrisburg, she urged all citizens to ask their representatives to protect the school system. She declared:

"A legislature which proposes a specific reduction in the salaries of other state employes and which has itself accepted no reduction apparently intends to permit our public school teachers to be the victims of slashes on which there is no limitation."

COX RUNS FREE BARBER SHOP

With the economy drive on down at Washington there is quite a controversy as to whether or not United States Senators will continue to get free shaves, haircuts and massages in the Senate tonsorial parlor operated at a cost of $6,000 per year by the government. There is no controversy of this character over the "tonsorial parlor" in the basement of old St. Patrick's Church where Pittsburgh's unemployed are welcome to shaves and haircuts.

In this shop there are three chairs manned by barbers in the conventional white canvass trousers, colored shirts and white bow ties. They get no compensation, but Father Cox looks upon their activities as one of the most beneficial of the many he operates.

He says:

"The unshaven man, also in need of a haircut, is in no condition to look for a job. Clean him up and you establish his morale." We do it for hundreds every week."

This, however, is only one of the many activities directed by the "father of the jobless," and he urgently needs funds to carry on. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it, brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

BUCS REACH KANSAS CITY

SPORT COMMENT

BLUES MAY GET WOOD, NOT BIRKOFER

THE PIRATE SQUAD is likely to be reduced by at least one player before it completes its visit of today and tomorrow in Kansas City. Inasmuch as the American Association club of that place is to get one or more of Pittsburgh's extra men on option under a new working agreement, the Buc management may turn this material over to the Blues at once instead of bringing it all the way East and then shipping it back again.

Bill Brubaker

Just what player or players will be turned over to Kansas City at this time can only be conjectured, but Charley Wood may be one good guess. Whether Ralph Birkofer will be another depends on Manager Gibson's being ready to choose between Birkofer and Hal Smith for the ninth place on the Pirate slab staff. Recently Gibby intimated that he might wait until May 15 before making that decision. Bill Brubaker probably will not be optioned to Kansas City unless the Pittsburgh club is unable to make the arrangements it would like to make elsewhere. The plan is to place the young third baseman in double A company somewhere in the East, so that he can be recalled in a hurry if Traynor has to leave the lineup. Kansas City may be considered too far away.

IT WILL TAKE the real championship season to show what may be expected of Babe Ruth this year. The Bambino has looked slow and off color in most of the Yankee exhibition games, but it doesn't necessarily mean he has gone back to that extent. He's cautious.

Ruth will not suffer the fate of Kiki Cuyler in any practice game, if he can avoid it. Win, lose or draw, Babe is taking no chances on breaking a leg, turning an ankle or tearing a rib loose. He goes along with his public up to a certain point, but refuses to run the risk of any crippling injury.

THE CARDINALS PICK up a lot of good ball players because they refuse to turn anybody away. Frank Krist, a fair college second baseman at St. John's in Brooklyn, failed utterly with the Braves this spring and was cast adrift. He knocked at the Cards' door, was received with open arms, made a good impression and has been farmed to Greensboro in the Piedmont League.

Possibly Krist never will amount to anything, but if he does the Cards will be the gainers. Most clubs won't let those fellows inside the park, but the Redbird bosses scent a possible bargain in every kid who applies. Sometimes they're right, and a single good one makes up for many failures.

BROOKLYN CRITICS PREDICT that if the Dodgers fail to do things this year it will be due to a lack of aggressiveness. The club is said to be too tame and easy-going; needs more of what it takes to start a fight. Umpire Bill Klem was still growling the other day following an exhibition game when he told of having seen a Brooklyn hurler in uniform sitting on the Buffalo club's bench after pitching his three innings. That is said to be characteristic of the Flatbush troupe. Some are too ready with a smile, too strongly inclined to fraternize with opponents, instead of fighting them. Others, like Ray Benge, are termed too quiet. But the chief fault is found with Johnny Frederick, who probably would be a great ball player but for a lack of pep.

Johnny Frederick

YOU MIGHT THINK that a player who was sought by six other National League clubs during the winter would be able to win a berth in a Brooklyn outfield that is none too strong defensively. Yet Frederick, who made 51 doubles in 1931 and six pinch home runs last year, continues to be just an extra man.

And it's all because Johnny, for some reason, can't be made to hustle. In a recent game he stood still and forced Charley Sheerin to run far over into his territory to make a hard catch. Frederick has everything else needed to win a regular berth, but lack of get up and go keeps him on the bench.

IT IS THE hope of Ted Lyons that the bolstered White Sox this year will enable him to realize an ambition to be on a winning club for the first time in his career.

Lyons has put in 10 seasons with the Pale Hose. Three times he won more than 20 games, and in one other year he won 18. But during all that period the Chisox never got out of the second division.

THE EASTERN PART of the state continues to honor the basketball players of Lower Merion High School and Coach William Hunter Anderson for their success in winning the interscholastic championship of Pennsylvania, for which Altoona High was defeated in the final after the elimination of South High, of this city. This was the third time Anderson had coached his team to the championship of Eastern Pennsylvania, but the first time it ever won the state title. Bill, a former Pittsburgher, got his athletic start at Shady Side Academy, where he won letters in football, baseball and track in addition to basketball. At Lafayette later he was a star student as well as a star athlete, being president of his class in both his junior and senior years.

ANDERSON WAS PERHAPS the only college boy of modern times to serve as both coach and player in basketball. When Punk Berryman resigned at Lafayette, Bill, in his junior year, was put in charge instead of a paid coach, and in addition to doing a nice job of coaching he led the team in scoring.

Anderson was graduated from Lafayette in 1919 and then spent three summers at the University of Pennsylvania, where, in addition to his other work, he took a course in the School of Physical Education. In the winter he returned to Lafayette as a paid coach in basketball and was a success from 1920 to 1928, inclusive.

THOUGH ARNOLD HORWEEN was supposed to be going out of football for good when he left Harvard, as coach, there is a chance he may return to the gridiron game. He is mentioned on a list of possible successors to I. D. McIntosh, as coach at Lake Forest College.

McIntosh resigned recently, and several prominent mentors have been under consideration for the vacancy, including Ralph Jones, coach of the Chicago Bears in the pro league; Pat Page, former grid chief at Indiana, and Paul Schissler, coach at Oregon State.

Georgia Coleman

DIANA FISHWICK, English golf star, isn't the only girl sports luminary to admit that women cannot compete with men in her game on equal terms. Georgia Coleman, diving champion, is equally frank. "There is no comparison between my dives and men's dives," says Georgia. "Men do more difficult dives and do them better. People watch me and the other girls dive just because we're girls and are pretty fair. But people who know diving would laugh at a comparison." The diving champion was married recently and now is Mrs. Roof Gilson, but publicly she will remain Georgia Coleman through the summer because before her marriage she accepted an offer to turn professional and wants to keep her word. She will dive every night in the pool at Jones Beach, but for far less money than she was supposed to get at first. The original offer from the coast was $500 a performance, but when Georgia reported for work they cut it to $150 a week. So she turned around and came back East, and now the coast people are suing her for transportation costs.

CRACK FIELDS ENTER LOCAL CARNIVALS

By JESS CARVER

Individual titles will be up for competition at Pitt and relay crowns at Carnegie Tech as the two city institutions stage their annual scholastic swimming carnivals today. In connection with the Pitt meet, which by the way, has its nineteenth annual renewal, the university championships will be decided.

Arrangements have been made to time the meets so that contestants and spectators alike may take part in both. The Pitt trials will get under way at 1 o'clock and will be over with by 3, at which time the Tech affair is to start. Tech's meet will be over and done with by 4:30 o'clock and the Pitt finals will not be called until 8 o'clock in the evening.

CHAMPS ON HAND

Defending champions will be on hand at both affairs. Duquesne's senior relay swimmers are favored to repeat their 1932 triumph in the Tech carnival. Erie Strong Vincent, which won the team trophy at Pitt last year, has another powerful team entered and is expected to lead the way in the scoring.

While Panther officials look for the establishment of at least four new records, while at Tech, the existing standards are expected successfully to withstand the assaults of the various relay quartets.

Erie East and Erie Academy, Wells High, of Steubenville, McKinley, of Canton, Homestead, Carrick and Duquesne will furnish the champion Strong Vincent team with its stiffest competition in the Panther carnival. The entry is heavy, more than 80 crack swimmers being set for competition, a husky field for an individual meet.

The records expected to be attacked most vigorously in the Pitt meet are the scholastic 220-yard free style and the university 100-yard free style, 150-yard back stroke and 440-yard free style events. Smith, of Erie Academy, looms as the lad most likely to crack the scholastic mark. He bettered the existing record of 2:26, set last year by Jack LaBedda, of Munhall, in the junior A. M. A. title meet in Erie several weeks ago.

The Pitt program follows:

AFTERNOON

1. 160-yard relay, trial heats.
2. 100-yard breast stroke, trial heats.
3. 40-yard free style, trial heats.
4. 220-yard free style, trial heats.
5. 40-yard free style, semi-finals.
6. 100-yard back strike, trial heats.
7. 100-yard free style, trial heats.
8. 180-yard medley relay.

EVENING

1. 160-yard relay, scholastic, finals.
2. 200-yard breast stroke, Pitt, finals.
3. 100-yard breast stroke, scholastic, finals.
4. 150-yard back stroke, Pitt, finals.
5. 40-yard free style, scholastic, finals.
6. 40-yard free style, Pitt, finals.
7. 220-yard free style, scholastic, finals.
8. 440-yard free style, Pitt, finals.
9. 100-yard back stroke, scholastic, finals.
10. 100-yard free style, Pitt, finals.
11. 100-yard free style, scholastic, finals.
12. Fancy diving, Pitt and scholastic.
13. 180-yard medley relay, scholastic, finals.
14. 220-yard free style, Pitt, finals.

14 RACES AT TECH

Both senior and junior teams will compete at Tech, four races being scheduled for both classes. Due to the necessity of staging trial heats in three events, the program will hold 14 races in all.

Carrick and Latimer, the schools that tied last year for the junior title, have complete teams entered and will renew their duel which wound up in a deadlock a year ago.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE LARGEST KNOWN FLOWER—The Rafflesia Arnoldi, a giant fungus which grows from the root or stem of large trees, is the largest flower known, having a diameter of three feet and weighing 15 pounds. The cup in the center holds 12 pints of water. Its color is that of flesh, with pink, yellow, brown and blue blotches. It remains expanded a few days only and then decays, emitting a putrid odor which attracts flies to facilitate its cross fertilization.

SAVOLDI WINS OVER LONDOS

CHICAGO, April 8.—(AP.)—Jumping Joe Savoldi, who used to shatter football lines for Notre Dame with his massive hulk, had one big area of the professional wrestling world rocking with claims and denials today.

Regarded as just another setup, Joe strode into the Chicago Stadium ring last night to tackle Jim Londos, the Grecian Adonis and claimant of the wrestling championship. To the amazement of 8,000 customers, he walked out of the ring with a one-fall victory after 20 minutes and 26 seconds of tugging.

The claims and denials then started to pop and today all was chaos.

First, Ed White, manager of Londos, claimed that the match, limited to one fall with a 90-minute time limit, was not a championship affair simply because of a ruling by the old Illinois State Athletic Commission that all wrestling matches were merely "exhibitions." The spectators howled White down.

Then Londos issued a statement in which he denied that Savoldi had thrown him, blaming Referee Bob Managoff for everything that happened.

At Friarspoint, Miss., Harry J. Landry, president of the National Wrestling Association, announced that Savoldi would not be recognized as champion of the association because the match was held outside of association territory and because the fall awarded Savoldi was not completed.

Ted Brinkley, varsity fullback candidate at Duquesne University, is in Mercy Hospital recovering from injuries received in spring football practice with the Dukes. Brinkley suffered a fractured jaw and a badly sprained back. His condition today was reported as fair.

Brinkley, who hails from Greensburg, was the regular freshman fullback last fall.

St. Vincent Cards Tough Grid Schedule

LATROBE, Pa., April 8.—Father Jerome Rupphret, O. S. B., director of athletics at St. Vincent College, has arranged another tough football schedule for 1933.

Gene Edwards, former Notre Dame varsity player, has been retained as coach.

Davis-Elkins will close the Bearcat schedule at the local college field on November 25. Last year the Mountaineers had a hard time repulsing the attack of the St. Vincent gridders.

Coach Edwards is expected to arrive at the college next week for spring training. The schedule follows:

October 1—St. Bonaventure, at Olean, N. Y.; October 14, Mt. St. Mary's, at home; October 21, Canisius, at home; October 27, Geneva, at Beaver Falls (night game); November 11, New River, at Montgomery, W. Va.; November 18, La-Salle, at home; November 25, Davis-Elkins, at home.

Geneva Calls Off Spring Grid Drills

BEAVER FALLS, April 8.—Jimmy Robertson and Robert Schmidt, head and assistant grid coaches respectively at Geneva College, have announced that they will not conduct any spring grid drills. Instead they will likely plan an earlier start in the fall.

It is believed that further aid to Robertson and Schmidt will be tendered by Marty Howell, of Freedom, and Sam Cooper, of Mon City, who finished their collegiate grid careers at Geneva last fall.

UTZ TO COACH

ALLENTOWN, Pa., April 8.—(AP.)—Johnny Utz, former University of Pennsylvania tackle and 1929 captain of the Red and Blue eleven, has been appointed to coach Muhlenberg College football for the 1933 season.

COURT FINALS ON TONIGHT

The finals of the annual A. M. A. independent basketball tournament and title clashes in the Greater Pittsburgh and Metropolitan leagues will be staged tonight.

On the North Side Community House floor, Brentwood meets Wilmerding in the A. M. A. senior final; the Frank Ferris quintet meets the Wright Senators for the light first-class crown and the North Braddock Vikings engage Kingsley House Reserves for the junior championship.

On the Salvation Army floor, the I. K. S. Midgets meet the Munhalls Ragans for the midget title, and the I. K. S. boys engage the Goldensons for the boys' crown. In final playoff games for the Greater Pittsburgh League banner, the J. W. Lodge team meets the American Legion Post No. 200 quintet and the Hurlers face the Rankin Croats for the Metropolitan loop crown.

Three titles will be decided on the Allegheny Y. M. C. A. floor.

Gospel Hall and North Juniors play off the honors in the Wednesday Night Sunday School League at 7 o'clock. The Sixth United Presbyterian and Calvary teams will decide the Saturday Night Church League championship in the second clash.

The Olympic club and the Frank Ferris "B" team will settle things in the Metropolitan League starting at 9 o'clock.

The Lawrenceville amateur basketball tournament comes to a close tonight at Forresters Hall. The Milkmaids meet the Harp Vaughans at 7 o'clock and the Lodge Club engages the Falcons at 8 o'clock. The winners meet in the final at 10 o'clock.

Huntington Signs Catcher Ragnow

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., April 8.—(AP.)—Milton (Rags) Ragnow, of Scranton, Pa., catcher for the Johnstown team of the Middle Atlantic League, has been signed by the Huntington Boosters to plug their backstop hole for this year's Mid-Atlantic campaign.

OKLAHOMA CITY BLANKED BY PIRATES, 4-0

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 8.—The well-conditioned Pirates this morning reached American Association territory, which circuit is scheduled to give the Buccos the finishing touches for the big stuff slated to begin Wednesday at Cincinnati.

Gibby's flag chasers will meet the Blues this afternoon and tomorrow. On Monday the Pirates will take on the Louisville Colonels at Louisville, this contest to mark the end of the long spring training junket. Tuesday is an open date on Pittsburgh's card.

The Blues are owned by Tris Speaker, Joe E. Brown and Lee Keyser. The former ace of center fielders will pilot the club from a dugout position. It is believed the new owners have at least a friendship tie with the Pittsburgh club and in this connection there is talk of leaving a Pirate or two behind under an option.

TO KEEP 10 HURLERS

Boss Gibson has only a few players to place. Gibby says he will keep 10 of his 11 pitchers until May 15, the dead line on big rosters. After that time all clubs must be down to 23 active players.

Southpaw Charley Wood is the only pitcher to be farmed out, the way the roads are now, and Gibby states he may keep the whole 11 flingers around for a while. However, there is a chance that Wood will be placed with the Blues.

One infielder also will be placed with a high-grade major league team. As Bill Brubaker needs seasoning, the big collegian is likely to be the athlete slated for a change. Almost any class AA team would welcome Peppery Bill, so there is a likelihood that he will be placed under the tutelage of Speaker.

Motion Picture Comedian Brown, who was a fair country ball player, is said to have a case on Brubaker. Bill played for Joe's club on the Coast, hence the chance of the tall third-sacker remaining here is strengthened as a result of the California hookup.

BUCS WIN SHUTOUT

Before leaving Oklahoma City yesterday, the Pirates treated the natives to a rare display of baseball, with the help of the local club of the Texas League. The diamond battle was a runless affair until the ninth when the Pirates opened up a four-run attack with two out to clinch the issue. Hal Finney's homer was the biggest punch of the inning. The score was 4 to 0.

Larry French gave the home folks something to talk about as he apparently tuned up for the inaugural in Cincinnati. The aggressive lefthander was in fine fettle as he reeled off five rounds of runless baseball. French allowed only four hits. Just to add a little spice the hard-worker fanned the side in the third.

Chilly Sauce

The Pirates picked up another juicy check at Oklahoma City. If Jerry Malin had not put the Corsairs on the spot at Amarillo, the Uncle Tom tour would have been a knockout from a gate standpoint.

Jerry is the sports editor of the paper owned by the gent who tried to take Col.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

WASHINGTON, April 8.—We are on the brink of another baseball season, as the fancy writers say it, and some major league clubs are thankful just to be alive. For a couple of outfits this springs' training was worse than sulphur and molasses. The Cubs and Giants got caught in that California earthquake, which I understand the local Chamber of Commerce is now laughing off as a four-alarm fire. But the Cubs and Giants didn't laugh about it till they were out on the Mojave Desert, heading East.

Nick Altrock

And on their way North from Florida, the Boston Red Sox were in a train wreck. It's bad enough to be tossed and jolted around by the other teams without a rail smashup doing it. However, the Red Sox can figure the worst is positively all over for them, no matter what happens from now on.

So, outside of earthquakes, train wrecks, Cuyler's broken leg and Hornsby's bum feet, the clubs are all ready for the regular season and they should feel as chipper as Washington's soldiers the spring after that winter at Valley Forge.

LEAFS, RANGERS RESUME DUEL FOR WORLD HOCKEY TITLE

RIVALS CLASH IN TORONTO TONIGHT

TORONTO, April 8.—(AP.)—The Toronto Maples Leafs, refreshed by a four-day rest and full of confidence, were ready today to step out against the New York Rangers in the second game of the final playoff series for the Stanley Cup and the world's professional hockey championship here tonight.

The Leafs had to start their home stand one game down after the 5-1 beating they took at New York last Tuesday in the opening contest of the three-out-of-five game series.

LEAFS HANDICAPPED

Toronto came to New York to start the finals the day after they finished a five-game duel with the Boston Bruins for the National Hockey League championship. Four of the games were overtime affairs, the last going to the record length of 164 minutes. They didn't have a chance and knew it, but they figure conditions will be altered. The Rangers, also realizing the difference, were expecting a hard game tonight although they, too, felt sure of a victory.

The Leafs can point to two important factors in their favor that point to victory. Last year, when the same teams clashed in the finals, Toronto won by the "tennis" scores of 6-4, 6-2 and 6-4 in games played at New York, Boston and Toronto. Few changes have been made in either team since then. During the past National League season the Rangers failed to win one game on Toronto ice.

SELLOUT ASSURED

Capacity crowds of 14,500 for tonight's game and for the third contest next Tuesday were assured several days ago when a complete sellout was announced.

The fourth and fifth games, if necessary, also will be played here.

The probable lineups:

Toronto.		Rangers.
Chabot	G.	Aitkenhead
Clancy	R. D.	E. Seibert
Day	L. D.	Johnson
Primeau	C.	Boucher
Conacher	R. W.	W. Cook
Jackson	L. W.	F. Cook

Toronto spares: Cotton, Bailey, Sands, Blair, Dorsty, Gracie, Thoms, Horner, Levinsky.

Ranger spares: Murdoch, Dillon, A. Siebert, Keeling, Somers, Osmundson, Pettinger, Heller, Brennan.

Referee—A. Smith.

GUNNERS MEET SHADY SIDE

In one last desperate drive to capture third place in the Pittsburgh Polo League, the 107th Field Artillery mallet wielders tonight clash with the youthful Shady Side Academy riders. The opening toss-in is scheduled for 8:45 o'clock.

By copping both their remaining contests, the Artillerymen can finish in third place, while an even split will deadlock them in that position with the 308th Cavalry entry.

The lineup:

Artillery	Pos.	Shady Side
Lieut. Kiser	No. 1	Diebold
Lieut. Collins	No. 2	McCahill
Lieut. Watson	No. 3	Aarog

PIRATES MEET KANSAS CITY

Lindbergh and Mary Garden to task for something or other.

The Bucs still talk of the Amarillo incident. The recollection of the lobby packed with boys and men seeking autographs and glimpses at the major leaguers will stay long with the athletes.

One nice mannered westerner with a five-gallon hat (and perhaps a six-shooter) told the writer he had driven 200 miles to see the game, but would be satisfied with Al Simmons' autograph. Fair enough.

Honus Wagner has evolved a new autograph system which works well. In his spare time he puts his monicker on cards and when he is stopped he passes them out.

Here is a minute movie of every station shed through which the Pirates have passed:

Old-time fan rushing after Wagner and hitting him on back:

"Hey, Honus, don't you remember me?"

Honus, fearful of missing the train, replies:

"Sure, you're Jake Wetmerkrant, who played with me in '96. How are all the folks, Jake?"

The Wagner boys collectively could not manufacture a hit in their home town game. The Wagner hit that scored heavily in every big city was a stage struck feminist the home folks.

DETROIT ELEVEN ON SCENE

By TOM BIRKS

The Detroit Rambler soccer team, champion of the Detroit American Soccer League, arrived in Pittsburgh this morning in charge of National Secretary John J. McEwan, of Cleveland, and will be quartered at the Fort Pitt Hotel during its stay in Pittsburgh.

The Ramblers will meet the Castle Shannon McKnights, champions of the Panhandle League, in the western final of the national amateur cup at Greenlee Field tomorrow afternoon. The kick-off is called for 2:45 o'clock.

Advices from Detroit have it that the Ramblers are one of the finest soccer aggregation ever gathered together in the Automobile City. If this is so, many of us who remember the famous Detroit Celtics and the Holley Carburetors feel that the young McKnight aggregation is in for a tough afternoon.

The McKnights, however, feel that they are capable of stopping the Western invaders, and of representing the West in the title final at Philadelphia April 22.

This afternoon the Beadling and Ambridge clubs meet in a benefit cup replay at Beadling.

DUNLAP WINS LINKS TITLE

PINEHURST, N. C., April 8.—(AP.)—Playing virtually the same brand of golf that gave him medalist honors and a tie for the course record in previous rounds, George T. Dunlap, Jr., of Garden City, L. I., yesterday defeated Jack Toomer, of Jacksonville, Fla., 7 and 5, to win the North and South amateur golf championship for a second time.

The Walker cup player was three under par for the 31 holes the match lasted. He held a four up lead at the end of the 18-hole morning round, and picked up three more holes on the first nine of the afternoon, to close out the Florida state champion with ease.

OUIMET'S GOLF

By FRANCIS OUIMET

Former National Amateur and Open Golf Champion.

One wonders what has happened to the game of golf in the past 10 or 15 years to increase its interest, and there may be many explanations to answer this question. Possibly it is due to the fact that there are a great many golf courses, and these would naturally stimulate interest in the game and bring new players into it.

There might be other reasons, too, along these same lines, but, in my opinion, the principal one that has to do with the great interest and increasing popularity in golf has been the fact that more youngsters have taken to playing the game of golf the last 10 years than ever before, and, therefore, with this new enthusiam, the game has surged forward to a great extent.

Francis Ouimet

I once got into an argument with a good friend because I was supposed to have made the statement that golf had come to the fore so rapidly that it had taken the place of baseball. I did not say this, and I do not believe that golf can take the place of our national game. However, I do think many youngsters are being attracted to golf because of the fact that there are so many courses to play over and also because so many young lads have made their mark at an early age, and golf has been discovered to be a young man's game as well as one for the older person.

HONORS FOR YOUNG PLAYER

Bobby Jones at the age of 14 played in his first major championship, and did extremely well. At the age of 17 or 18, he was a finalist in the National championship. Sarazen was a winner of major titles at 21, and the list is large of those young professionals and amateur stars who have won high honors.

All of these things have been extremely interesting to the younger generation, and the other fact that golf is a game that can be played by an individual also explains why it has become so popular. Wen I think of my early days when I was ambitious to become a baseball player, the neighborhood I lived in was so sparsely settled that I could not find anybody half of the time to even toss a ball to, and, therefore, I took to golf because it was a game that I could amuse myself with if I had to play alone.

One of the most enjoyable games I have played was with former Gov. Cox, of Ohio. The Governor is one of the most ardent players I have ever met, a gentleman who has analyzed the game thoroughly, has spent a good deal of time in practice, with the result that he not only has a fine swing, but is a very steady performer. During the course of our round, I was interested to hear the Governor say that golf was not only a fine game in that it took you out in the fresh air and sunshine, but above that it taught everyone who played it the virtue of self-control.

JONES DESERVES CREDIT

In giving this idea some thought, it occurred to me that no finer example of this could be found than the case of Bobby Jones. As a very young player, Bobby had perhaps one of the most impetuous dispositions I have ever seen. Apparently he felt that every time he hit the ball, it must go on a beeline for the flag. If he mishit one, that was the signal for him to throw a club or even break one. For several years, it reacted most unfavorably against him in the championships that he played in. Finally he saw the error of his ways, curbed his temper and with it all began to win titles.

The list of those who succeeded in golf has been comparatively small compared to the tremendous numbers that play the game, but, as Governor Cox so aptly put it, the ones who do win are those that have the good sense to control their temper, regardless of what may happen, and, in connection with this, I am happy to say there is not a better poised player in the game in the world than Bobby Jones which, in my opinion, establishes him as a great man because he could and did control a high temper.

CUBS, CHISOX PLAY TODAY

CHICAGO, April 8.—(AP.)—Chicago's Cubs and White Sox, two of the greatest rivals in baseball, squared away at Comiskey Park today for the first of a two-game series to decide the city championship.

Breaking even in two early spring exhibitions at Los Angeles, the two teams planned to throw their full strength into the game, weather permitting. Teddy Lyons, picked to hurl the American League opener against Cleveland, was slated to pitch for the improved South Siders, with Guy Bush tossing for the Cubs.

A crowd of 15,000 or more was expected to watch the game.

The White Sox, their hopes high for a first division team through the acquired help of Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Jimmy Dykes, arrived home from their spring training trip yesterday while the Cubs steamed in early today from Kansas City, where they wound up their spring campaign with a 10-to-2 victory over Kansas City.

Babe Herman twisted his ankle sliding home in the first inning of the game, but the injury was not regarded as serious.

Baseball Briefs

CINCINNATI—(AP.)—After spending all training season helping the Cincinnati Reds round into shape, Jewel Ens, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has signed as coach of the Cincinnati team, to serve under Donie Bush, his predecessor in Pittsburgh. The Reds practiced yesterday beneath the stands of Redland Field, were President Sidney Weil announced, beer will be sold when the season opens.

INDIANAPOLIS—(AP.)—Dixie Walker, International League recruit, led the New York Yankees' attack with a home run, a double and a single as the world champions closed their exhibition tour by defeating St. Paul, of the American Association, 6 to 3, yesterday. Babe Ruth played three innings, getting one hit, a double, before retiring in favor of Dusty Cooke.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP.)—With Earl Averill contributing a home run and Chalmers Cissell ramping out four singles out of four times at bat, the Cleveland Indians defeated Birmingham, 5 to 2, yesterday. Weinraub, Baron outfielder, also hit a homer.

NORFOLK, Va.—(AP.)—Twenty-three hits, including two home runs by George Davis, Bill Terry and Hank Leiber, rattled off the New York Giants' bats yesterday to give them a 17-to-7 victory over the Detroit Tigers and even the series at four-all. The two teams play in New York today and tomorrow.

WASHINGTON.—(AP.)—Washington's Senators bunched 10 hits behind Alvin Crowder's pitching yesterday for a 4-to-1 win over the Brooklyn Dodgers in a pre-season exhibition. Benge and Mungo shared the tossing for the losing National Leaguers, while Joe Judge got two hits out of four tries and assisted in two double plays against his former teammates.

LOS ANGELES—(AP.)—Ed Baecht, big right-handed pitcher, has been traded by Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast League to Minneapolis of the American Association for Hughie McMullen, catcher. No cash was involved.

BOSTON.—(AP.)—Art Shires, colorful first baseman, has quit the Boston Braves, according to advices from Manager Bill McKechnie. Shires, unable to cope with Baxter Jordan for a regular berth, refused to accept the reduced salary offered him several days ago by President Emil Fuchs. McKechnie reported him as returning to his home in Chicago, where he will try to catch on with a strong minor league club.

FLOOR RULES TO STAND

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP.)—Basketball leaders from every section of the country reported that the game is in the most flourishing condition of its history, as the annual three-day convention of the National Association of Basketball Coaches continued its sessions yesterday.

So satisfied did the coaches appear with the rules as they now stand that, aside from a movement toward unanimity of interpretation by officials, and minor clarification changes, there appeared little likelihood of any recommendations for further revision of the code at the coaches' rules committee meeting today.

Eastman Suffers Injury to Leg

PALO ALTO, Cal., April 8.—(AP.)—Ben Eastman, Stanford's world quarter-mile record holder, pulled a muscle in his left leg yesterday during an intra-team meet and may be lost to competition for both the California meet a week from Saturday and the Southern California classic April 22.

He was taken to the Palo Alto Hospital for examination.

LOCALS ENGAGE BUFFALO IN SQUASH TEST

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Inter-city squash racquet competition tops this afternoon's club sport card as Buffalo stars mingle with Keystone Athletic Club contenders in battle of three-man teams on the K. A. C. gallery court.

Today's event will be followed tomorrow by a bracket-of-eight elimination tournament wherein the six interurban contestants, plus Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, of the P. A. A., and Joe Oliver, of the Pittsburgh Golf Club, will joust for individual honors.

Cy Polley, Bison City premier, meets Bill Bickel, Keystone ace and runner-up to the Steel City tackle, in the inter-city feature at 2:30 p. m. The Polley-Bickel affair will be followed by fracas involving Jack Nitterauer, Buffalo runner-up, with Charley Fagan, veteran home tactician, while Harry Howkins, invading No. 3 performer, encounters Jean Caspar, K. A. C. class B champion, in the wind-up.

REED TO REFEREE

McCook Reed, first ranking Pittsburgher the past two seasons, will officiate as referee. Reed is suffering from tennis elbow and is likely to be out of action for the better portion of a year.

Racqueters from organizations affiliated with the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association have been invited to sit in on the two-day Keystone program. Upon the interest and enthusiasm shown during the impending week-end will depend in great measure local chances of landing the 1935 national squash racquets championship tournament.

Polley, assistant secretary of the U. S. S. R. A., was slated to confer with the Keystone board of directors at luncheon today in regard to the possibility of installation of four regulation courts in time for award of the '35 nation-wide titular event to Pittsburgh.

NET CONFAB TODAY

Meanwhile, in New York this afternoon, the United States Lawn Tennis Association executive committee gathers in spring conclave. Among subjects certain to come up for discussion is the matter of staging the 1934 U. S. L. T. A. meeting in Pittsburgh. P. T. A. officials have at hand letters from such net notables as Samuel H. Collom, Middle States president; Walter L. Pate; W. Merrill Hall, U. S. L. T. A. treasurer; Jones W. Mersereau, chairman of the national advisory and finance committee; Joseph W. Ivy, second vice president; Irving C. Wright, Joseph W. Wear, Paul Gibbons, former national secretary; Holcombe Ward, first vice president of the U. S. L. T. A. and president of the Eastern L. T. A., and Julian S. Myrick, former U. S. L. T. A. president. Myrick alone appears to view the Pittsburgh move with disfavor.

The final tilt of the P. A. A. intra-mural squash recquets tourney has been postponed because of a slight eye ailment bothering Dave O'Loughlin, who is to meet Bill Hutchins for the trophy. It is possible that the match will be run off this afternoon, but the probability is that there'll be nothing doing until Tuesday of the coming week.

Sports Gathering Planned by Layden

A get-together dinner at which athletic chiefs, sports scribes and others interested in collegiate and athletic sports is being planned by Elmer Layden, athletic director of Duquesne University, to be held at one of the downtown hotels on or about May 12.

Layden would like to hear from collegiate and scholastic athletic leaders with regard to their views on the project.

Cincinnati Park To Be Ready For Opener

"Park O. K. Everything looks good for opener."

Thus did Sidney Weil, president of the Cincinnati Baseball Club, today dispel any doubt that the Pirates-Reds National League opener would not be played as scheduled next Wednesday.

The reassurance from Weil was received by Sam Watters, vice president and secretary of the Pittsburgh Club, in the form of a telegram after widely-published reports that the Cincinnati park was "under two feet of water" had aroused suspicions that the lid-lifter might have to be postponed.

Weil's telegram was in answer to one by Watters in which the latter questioned the condition of the Reds' playing field.

OHIO BOWLERS ROLL HIGH

COLUMBUS, O., April 8.—More prize money is set to go East today as a result of the pin gathering ability displayed by Warren, O., Youngstown and Akron bowlers in the annual American Bowling Congress tourney the last few hours.

Warren lads shown with particular brilliance as the Folsome Lunch team pecked out a 2,180 and the Osborne Clothiers hit 2,777. Warren Alleys, of Youngstown, produced 2,699 and Gough Chevrolet, 2,674. Firestone Dept. 217 had a 2,666 and Browns Drugs, of Alliance, 2,694.

Two Akron pairs went well into the doubles money, B. Cole and E. Carpenter showing a 1,190 and F. McCambridge and C. Crockston a 1,175. Cole came back in the singles to toss off a 667.

Al Brandt, of Lockport, N. Y., came within three pins of tying the American Bowling Congress three-game record, 774, established by Larry Shotwell, Covington, Ky., at Cleveland, in 1930.

Paired with Eddie Oates, Brandt scored games of 288, 228 and 255, while his partner was contributing 193, 195 and 194. The pair had games of 481, 423 and 449 in totalling 1,353 for third berth in the doubles class. Brandt counted 630 in the team competition.

BOXER SUFFERS BROKEN JAW AT ARENA

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

History repeated last night as Frank Novak, North Side heavyweight, came from behind to whip Jack Pallat, of Cleveland, twice national amateur heavyweight champion. Only this time Fate did not intervene and rob Novak of the fruits of his victory. When the pair met in the same ring a little more than a month ago, Frank rallied after absorbing an early beating and had Pallat on the run and ready for a knockout in the tenth round when the referee had to call a halt because Frank was losing too much blood from a badly cut eye.

Last night's fight, the windup at the Arena, on the North Side, started out the same as their first clash, with Pallat, with his long left hand, better boxing ability and smoother footwork, taking four of the first six rounds and holding his own in the others.

Then Novak dug in grimly and chased his opponent all over the ring for the remainder of the battle, swinging with both fists and connecting solidly to the head and body. Almost immediately Pallat lost his boxing form and fell to floundering all over the place. He had to hold and cover to avoid punishment, and was glad to hear the final bell. The decision for Novak was unanimous.

BOXER IN HOSPITAL

Danny Devlin, of Allentown, Pa., suffered a broken jaw in the seventh round of his scheduled 10-round semi-final with Tiger Joe Randall, Elizabeth Negro welterweight, and lost by a technical knockout, Referee Jack Henderson stopping the bout. The boxer was taken to the Mercy Hospital for treatment. The hospital this morning reported the full extent of Devlin's injuries could not be determined until X-ray photos were taken.

Randall had all the better of the bout, Devlin being strictly a counter puncher, who landed solidly, but not very often. He set back Randall with a left hook to the jaw as the latter swarmed out of his corner to the attack in the second round, but was staggered himself by a right late in the third, had his left ear badly cut in the fourth and had to turn to the referee for protection after the final blow broke his jaw. It was a good win for Randall, for Devlin came here with the hope of selling himself as a future opponent for Ted Yarosz.

Joe Doktor, Buffalo heavyweight, outboxed Frankie Edgren, of Cheyenne, Wyo., in the first 10-rounder, a drab affair, but Edgren got the unanimous decision after being warned repeatedly in his corner and during the rounds by Referee Al Grayber to cut out clowning and talking and stalling and stick to his knitting. He was a harder puncher than Doktor, but tired early. He rallied in the last round to drop Doktor for a count of two, which probably influenced the decision.

PIRRUNG STOPPED

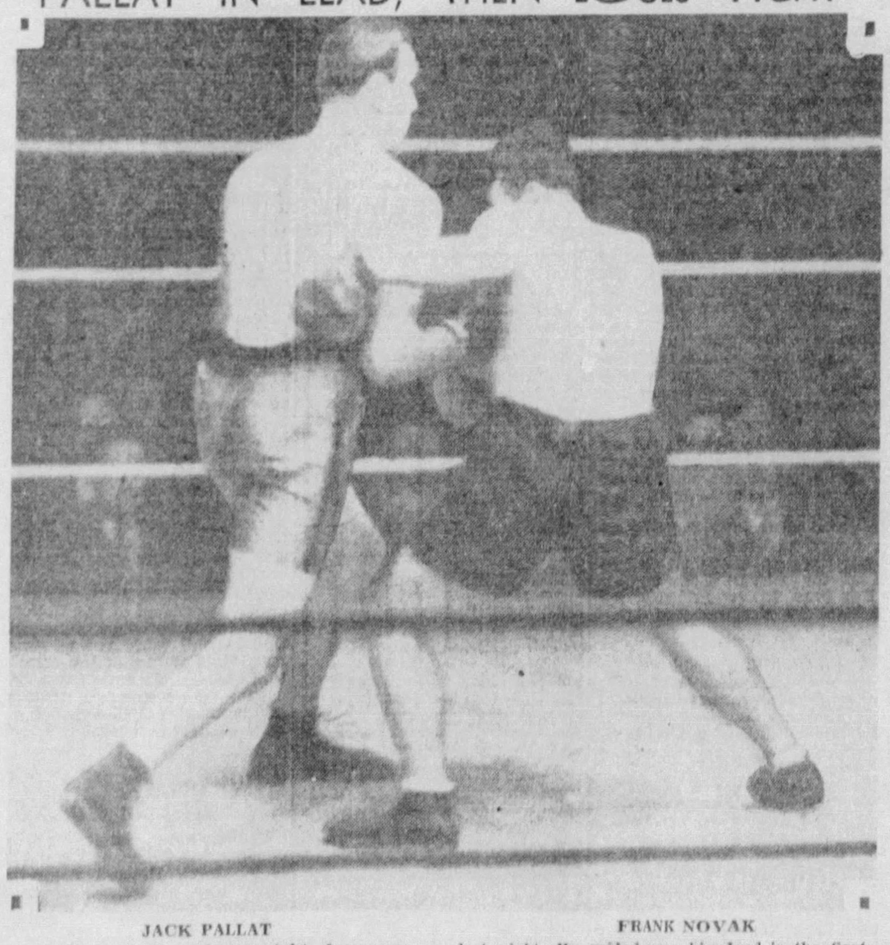
Jack Kearns, New Castle heavyweight, flattened big George Pirrung, 218½-pounder from Homestead, with a right to the jaw in the second round of a scheduled five-rounder, after having taken a lot of punishment himself up to that time.

Curley Klaas, of the North Side, outfought Mike Mitchell, Bellaire (O.) light-heavyweight, all of the way in the first five-round bout, Mitchell claiming he hurt a hand in the first round.

The crowd was only fair in size. It was announced that next week's card, to be staged Thursday night, will include three 10-round bouts, with Jackie Wilson boxing Johnny Pena, Jimmy Thomas meeting Pete De Grasse and Mose Butch taking on Johnny Hines.

Andy Di Vodi is due in tomorrow morning from Chicago for his 10-round windup with Ted Yarosz at Motor Square Garden Monday night. He will work out in the Garden gym during the afternoon.

PALLAT IN LEAD, THEN LOSES FIGHT



JACK PALLAT

Pallat, Cleveland heavyweight, former national amateur champion, sending his right to the body of Novak, local boxer, in the early stages of their 10-round windup at the Arena last night. He piled up a big lead in the first six rounds, but Novak rallied to wipe it out and win the decision. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

DEMPSEY GETS NEW DATE

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey, apparently packing as heavy a wallop as a promoter as he did when a fighter, won the second round of his battle with Jimmy Johnston and Madison Square Garden over dates for their star heavyweight attractions this summer.

Discovering that he had outsmarted himself in obtaining the June 1 date for the Max Schmeling-Max Baer bout he stole from under the Garden's nose, Dempsey got a shift to June 8 from the New York State Athletic Commission yesterday.

The commission at the same time deferred action on a Garden request to hold its title fight between Primo Carnera and Jack Sharkey on June 15.

Have you completed it? It's easy. Watch for the answer and a new cipher Monday.

By KENNETH A. NAGEL
Cipher Editor.

Is Cipher No. 81 proving hard for you. It shouldn't be so tough. Perhaps, after the tip today, you will succeed. Let's hope so. Well, here it is:

This cipher consists of one alphabet. Make up a code chart with the numbers, four, three, two and one at the top. Next run the numbers from one to seven along the side of the chart. Then for a start put the letters "A", "B", "C" and "D" under your first four numbers. Now, you finish it. The Cipher Editor just about told you how to work it. Well, there is still a little work to be done before you have completed it. Go to it and see what you can do.

CITY MANAGER ACTION NEAR

A promise of definite action by the Legislature on the city manager plan has been given Senator Frank J. Harris, he declared in an address over Station WJAS last night. In tracing the growth of the movement started a year ago he praised the response of Democrats to the measure, adding that the action of Republicans was "not encouraging." He said in part:

"I have a promise for definite action next Tuesday, but whether it will be favorable no one can foretell.

"If this legislation is passed and signed by the Governor, and we have every assurance that the Governor will sign it, it would then be placed upon the ballot and the voters would decide by a majority vote whether they favor this type of government for the conduct of their city's business. The only thing we ask of the Legislature is for it to give to the people of Pittsburgh the opportunity of deciding for themselves the kind of government they desire."

The Flapper's Daughter

By BEATRICE BURTON

THRILLING NOVEL OF THE CHILDREN OF DANCING MOTHERS

CHAPTER XVI.

This was the moment that Mrs. Barnum picked to come across the hall with Sharlie's bedroom slippers in her hand.

"You left these under Gertrude's bed," she was beginning when Sharlie's mother interrupted her sharply:

"Mrs. Barnum, may I ask you what time Sharlie got to your place last night?"

"Let's see—" Mrs. Barnum put her head to one side, thinking. "It was about 10 when you telephoned Jim from that dance hall, wasn't it, Sharlie?"

"Dance hall!" echoed Dodie, her blue eyes widening. "Were you dancing last night, Sharlie?"

"At Joyland," said Sharlie simply. "You didn't want me here because you were going to have a card party, and grandmother wasn't home. So what was I supposed to do. Where was I supposed to go?"

Not one of them had an answer for her.

"Well, I must go and put my roast on," Mrs. Barnum murmured and, with a nod in Grandmother Dunn's direction, she went out, closing the door sharply behind her.

"You should have telephoned to find out whether your grandmother was at home last night before you started out," Dodie burst forth as soon as she was gone.

She turned to her mother-in-law:

"She probably did try to telephone! She probably knew you weren't at home before she started out! Now, I ask you, how can I be expected to take care of her when she lies to me and deceives me every chance she gets?"

GRANDMOTHER LEAVES

Grandmother Dunn's eyes went from her to Sharlie. They seemed to take in the room, too, in that sweeping glance—the empty glasses and the dice on the floor.

She turned her straight narrow back upon them and stalked out of the flat without another word.

"Now I suppose she'll go to your father as soon as he comes home with the story that Maud and I staged a wild party here last night!" Dodie said bitterly as soon as she was gone.

"Well, that's what you did have, wasn't it?" asked Sharlie.

But Sharlie felt as if she were talking to a child at that moment. There was a new dignity about her as she faced her mother. A dignity that neither her tragic marriage nor her widowhood had given her.

"Dodie, how could you do a thing like that to dad?" she asked. "I could hardly believe my eyes when I looked in at the kitchen window last night and saw those two men there with you and Maud . . . That was pretty cheap stuff, I thought."

"What do you mean, talking like this to your mother?" Maud Hanaberry's metallic voice asked suddenly, and she wheeled around.

Maud's face was distorted with anger.

EDNA RETURNS

"Dodie," she said, "you're crazy to let this kid talk to you the way she's been talking! It's none of her business what you do and the sooner she gets that through her head the better. If I were you I'd pack her off to her grandmother's until her father gets back to town. She's too much for you to try to handle—the smart little Brass Face!"

Sharlie's mother put one of her hands over her eyes.

"I think you're right, Maud," she said weakly. "But you know how her father will rave if I don't keep her here."

"Well, I'll relieve you of all your responsibility!" Sharlie cut in. "I'll pack up and go to grandmother's myself, and you can tell him I went there on my own!"

She spent the rest of the morning cleaning the flat.

She never had really enjoyed housework before. She always had tried to get out of doing any. But it was fun, somehow, to get the unclean smoky smell out of the rooms. To sweep all the cigaret stubs together and take them down to the trash-barrel in the yard.

Her mother did not speak to her.

At noon she and Maud got dressed and went out for dinner. Maud asked Sharlie to go with them if she was hungry.

But Sharlie wasn't the least bit hungry. She was hurt and angry and she longed to pack up her things and get out of the house.

At half past two, while she was packing, Edna came walking in. Her hair was windblown and she had a most beautiful sunburn on her arms and face.

"Some relatives dropped in on the Bowers unexpectedly a while ago, so I made myself scarce," she explained. "That's why I'm back so terribly, terribly early—and maybe you think I didn't hate to leave! I was having the best time! Country dance last night and a long hike this morning through fields of cows and things!"

She looked down at the bags. "Where do you think you're going?" she asked.

Sharlie shook her pretty head. "Edna, I can't stand it around here any longer," she said dismally. "Maud Hanaberry has my mother under her thumb—and I know she invited some men here last night—"

Crying under her breath, she told Edna the whole story of the night before. The only part that she left out was the bit about the man who had "picked her up" at Joyland.

"And I'm not going to be treated like this—as if I were a bad child," she wound up passionately. "I'm going to get out of this place and stay out—"

"Yes, but you're going about it in the wrong way," Edna said calmly. "It's all right for you to go to your grandmother's to stay until your father gets home if you want to. But this is your home and you ought to live in it . . . Your problem is all this time that you have on your hands. It's no wonder you get into mischief with nothing real and important to do."

"Dodie won't let me get a job, and she says it costs a lot to go to business school," said Sharlie, dabbing at her eyes with a small pink handkerchief.

"Well, I'll lend you the money for it—and you can pay me back as soon as you're earning a salary," Edna went on. "You come up to my office tomorrow noon and I'll take you over to the Gerow Business School myself."

FINDS MAN'S CARD

The door bell rang.

"Now, who can that be? Your mother and her girl friend returning, I suppose," muttered Edna. "I'll go to the door."

Sharlie heard her talking to a man. Then the door closed and she came back into the bedroom.

"It was a man asking for "Miss Dunn and Miss Hanaberry," she said, frowning in a puzzled way. "A tall blond man—very good looking."

"I'll bet a hat that it was one of those men that they had here last night!" cried Sharlie, and ran to the front windows of the flat . . . Sure enough, the cream-colored roadster was on the other side of the street. One man was sitting in it, and a tall blond one in white clothes was just getting into it.

That night Sharlie slept in a little back bedroom in her grandmother's house on Milton street.

On Monday morning she started off for Edna's office. Sitting in the street car she found the card that she had slipped into her bag on Saturday night—the card that the man who had "picked her up" at Joyland had given her.

With something between shame and thrilled anticipation in her face she read the name that was engraved on it—"Cadwell Dean." Below it his telephone number was penciled—"Vancouver 1689 W."

"As if I'd call him up!" she said to herself, scornfully, and slipped the card back into her bag.

But far back in her mind something told her that she was going to call him up. Some instinct told her that here was Adventure—and when did a young thing like Sharlie ever pass up Adventure?

Synopsis

Pretty Sharlie Dunn is forced by her mother to marry Eddie Wallis, young ne'er-do-well after Sharlie had spent the night in his car, which had run out of gas. Although Sharlie enjoys Eddie's company, she is not in love with him. After the ceremony, Eddie takes Sharlie to live in his untidy apartment. That night Eddie is killed by an automobile. Sharlie returns to her mother's home. Mrs. Dunn and her friend, Maud Hanaberry, plan a party while their husbands are away. Sharlie is sent to her grandmother's. Finding her grandmother out, Sharlie goes to a dance hall. She meets a young man named Percy who insists on taking her home. Frightened, she phones Jim Barnum, a neighbor's son, who takes her to his home. Peeking in a window, she sees her mother and Maud Hanaberry with two men. Next morning Grandmother Dunn calls and reprimands Dodie.

ELECTRIC LOCOMOTIVE HAULING A TRAIN (Transportation)

The passenger locomotive develops 3,750 horsepower, with three driving axles and can pull a train at speeds up to 90 miles an hour. The freight locomotive of parent design develops 2,500 horsepower with four driving axles. Three freight locomotives will haul a 5,000-ton train at 45 miles an hour on the level, or up a 1 per cent grade at 29 miles.

CAPITOL BUILDING IN SAN JUAN (Porto Rico)

Porto Rico in the Atlantic Ocean is one of the most beautiful of Uncle Sam's insular possessions. It was taken during the Spanish-American War, 1898. It costs great financial sacrifices to develop the neglected and poor former Spanish colony into the beautiful, well-organized, modern country it is today. (Problems of Democracy.)

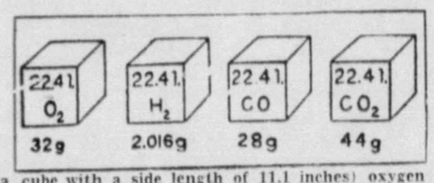
THE MOLECULAR WEIGHT



The chosen molecular weight of oxygen is 32. 22.4 liter (volume of a cube with a side length of 11.1 inches) oxygen weighs 32 grams. According to Avogadro's law, the weight of any substance of such volume in gaseous state (at standard pressure) gives the molecular weight. Picture shows this for different gases. The atomic weight of oxygen and hydrogen is half of the molecular weight, as two atoms form a molecule. (Foster: The Elements of Chemistry.)

KING ALFRED AT LAUNCHING OF A WARSHIP (10 Centuries Ago)

Alfred the Great, King of Wessex (871-900) is most noteworthy for his successful battles against the Danish invaders. Besides, he was a great scholar, advancing the civilization of his people by founding schools. He also recognized the importance of a good navy for England's safety and encouraged ship-building. VITAMINS E, F AND G (Science)

Certain foods contain essentials for muscular development and for the nutritional process of reproduction. Omitting these foods, animals suffer muscular degeneration and become sterile. This essential part of the food is called vitamin E. It is contained in germ of wheat (richest), in the muscles, fat, egg yolk, milk, lettuce, vegetable and seed oils (cottonseed, olive), bananas, oranges and cod liver oil (slight). The vitamin originally called B (see issue of April 1) was found to be a mixture of vitamins; the antineuritic factor is called by some research workers vitamin F (is identical with vitamin B in our account), the other part received the name vitamin G and is antipellagric in its effect (see issue of April 4). Sources of vitamin G: Yeast, lean meats, kidney, liver, heart, salmon, eggs, milk, cheese, green leafy vegetables, germ of cereals, bananas. Soda destroys vitamin G and so is not to be used in cooking of any of these foods.

What Do You Hoard?

We might as well set everybody right on the egg. During the famous March bank holiday we were accused of having a safety deposit vault in a carbarn.

We confess it. But we hoarded no gold. In that certified cave of Ali Baba we had placed the treasures of a lifetime.

When the embargo was lifted on misers we dashed to the treasure trove and thumbed over the plunder to see if it was all there.

Strange, the things a man saves when he has no hope of ever being a bride or even a bridesmaid.

First, and most important, there was a first baseman's glove. Lefthanded. And now 33 years old. Still in good shape. We got it after it had run the gamut of all the lefthanders in the gang. Sosa Naylor was the original owner and bought it for one-fifty. He sold it a season later to Chalker Brown for 55 megs of the realm. Chalker let it go two years later to Scabby Spangler for 25 cents and we nailed it the next summer for 15. That was our price. We couldn't buy much. But we were a demon on anything that didn't cost over 15 cents.

We have another glove that is comparatively young. It is only 22 years old and was purchased from a window in a sporting goods store. We are going to hang on to that until it gets some seasoning. We don't play any more. But every spring we get out the two gloves and rub them with saddle soap to keep 'em soft.

The second glove cost more. But it is still too new. You've got to break in baseball goods to make 'em right. And when you get 'em the way you want 'em you hate to leave 'em go.

We lost our greatest relic of baseball. It was a Giant cap we captured during the famous battle between the old Giants and Philadelphia rooters. That was started when McGann or somebody slid home and broke Red Dooin's leg. We chased the Giants into a tea company store on Huntington street. For over an hour we threw in rocks, bricks and small boys. And for over an hour the Giants threw out canned beans, canned tomatoes, raw potatoes, kindling wood, cash registers, hard green apples, flower pots, rock candy, turnips and small boys.

The writer was one of the small boys. He sailed out on a perfect parabola from the end of John McGraw's foot. But he had John's cap. And he still considers the flight a moral victory.

Relief Comes First

All Else Before the Legislature Is of Secondary Importance—Comment on Local News.

While members of the Legislature contend in an unelevating struggle for jobs and privileges, the zero hour rapidly approaches when funds for the relief of 2,000,000 destitute Pennsylvanians will be exhausted. Unless the Legislature acts promptly, disaster is in sight, for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has refused to advance any more money until the state assumes a greater share of the burden.

The House of Representatives at Harrisburg has passed, it is true, the Talbot bill appropriating $20,000,000 for relief, but this is an empty gesture, because it has provided no means of raising the money. Gov. Gifford Pinchot has given fair warning that he will veto any relief measure which makes no provision for collecting the money.

The Legislature is counting on raising the relief funds through economies in the state government which is a hope rather than an expectation, and a hope based on a flimsy foundation. Furthermore, the $20,000,000 appropriation called for in the Talbot bill is utterly inadequate. Local authorities estimate that the state will have to spend $120,000,000 for relief during the next 12 months.

With starvation staring 65,000 families in the face in Allegheny County alone, the legislators continue to waste time with their selfish wrangles over the question if the old License Court, with its lucrative practice for lawyers, shall be re-established, or if beer licenses shall be dispensed by commissions of salaried politicians. In the meanwhile the state loses daily thousands of dollars in beer taxes.

Many important things remain to be done by the General Assembly—the enactment of legislation which will assure the people of a square deal from the public utilities, action on the child labor amendment to the United States Constitution and various proposed amendments to the State Constitution, and various things affecting the municipal government of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County—but poor relief is of the first importance.

One measure on which the Legislature should "make haste slowly" is the Coyne pension bill for Allegheny County employes. The County Commissioners assert the present employes' pension fund is insolvent. Senator Coyne's measure requires the Commissioners to appropriate enough money to put it on a sound basis. Auditors employed by the Commissioners report an appropriation of $5,500,000 would be necessary by next February. The taxpayers cannot stand that.

The dispute over the pension system for county employes rages around the interpretation to be placed on the law's provision that the County Commissioners shall appropriate annually into the pension fund not less than one-half of one per cent and not more than two per cent "of all available moneys received by the county as taxes during the preceding calendar year."

The County Commissioners, the employes charge, have not been making the appropriations as required. The Commissioners say no moneys were available after the payment of subsidies and salaries fixed by law, debt interest, sinking fund requirements, road, park and other expenses. The vagueness of the law, leaving it in doubt as to whether pension appropriations are mandatory, is at the bottom of the trouble.

As an example of the things that have bankrupted the County Employes' Pension Fund the auditors who have been studying it report the case of a pensioner whose total payments to the fund amounted to $27.50, but who has drawn $20,000 in pensions since his retirement in 1916. It is evident that the Fund cannot survive without some change in the present arrangements.

The city had on its payroll until recently an official who, it is said, saved the taxpayers many times the amount of his salary by his energy and watchfulness in the operation of his department. We refer to Elmer G. Loomis, assistant superintendent of the Bureau of Electricity, who died Wednesday and is being buried today. For many years he was on the job from early in the morning until late at night.

The Retail Grocers' Association announces another wedding will be held at the forthcoming Food Show at Motor Square Garden. They have checked on three weddings held at former Food Shows and found that they turned out happily. The wedding will be an attraction, to be sure, but there will be no lack of other interesting things at the exhibition. Every housewife should attend it.

L. L. Bishop, supervisor of the Allegheny National Forest, paints an attractive picture of the life that will be led by the men lucky enough to be accepted for enlistment in President Roosevelt's Civilian Conservation Corps. Those whose camp is to be established in Heart's Content, near Sheffield, are especially to be envied; for it is a beautiful virgin forest of majestic white pine trees, second only to the Cook Forest in grandeur and picturesqueness.

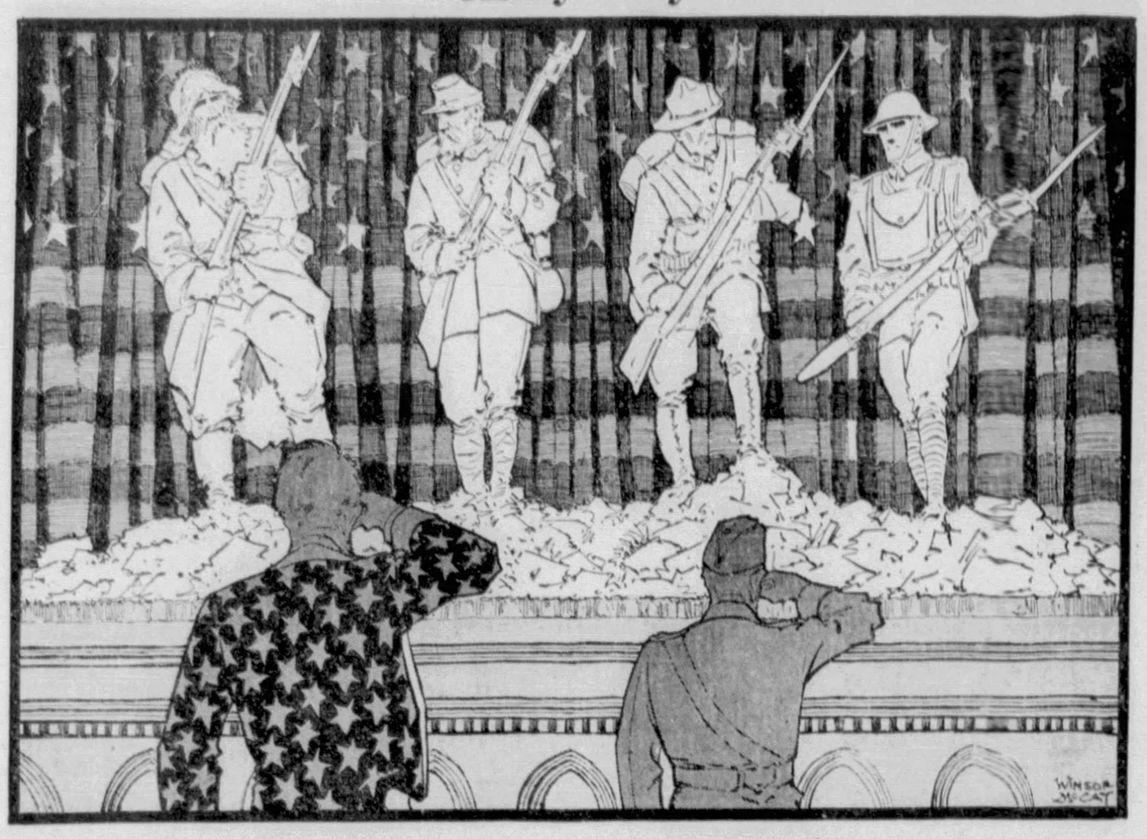
*The County Commissioners acted wisely in con*sulting John M. Phillips, former chairman of the State Game Commission, in regard to the disposition that should be made of the surplus deer and bison in the county parks. And Mr. Phillips has given some good advice, not only as to the deer and bison, but also as to the desirability of encouraging the flocks of pheasants and quail to stay in the parks by planting buckwheat for them.

The Chamber of Commerce plans to send a delegation to Washington to urge the construction of storage reservoirs at the headwaters of the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers to protect Pittsburgh and the Ohio Valley from floods. Fine! But would it not strengthen the move to get the co-operation of other chambers of commerce throughout the valley and have them send delegations to Washington, too?

The next important event, in the opinion of many Pittsburghers, will be the opening of the baseball season. A portrait of George Gibson, manager of the Pirates, will be printed in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. There will be other sports pictures, too, including one of the women's rifle team at the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

The American Weekly, issued as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, will have an interesting article about a new kind of staircase constructed by a French scientist—the first improvement in stairs in 5,000 years, it is said. The cover of the magazine presents a picture in full color of "Iris and the God of Sleep," by Edmund Dulac, the English artist.

Army Day



Four times in a century—as this picture denotes—America has had to wage foreign wars. In the last and greatest of these wars—the World War—billions of dollars were wasted, and not a few lives were needlessly sacrificed, because we were unprepared. An army had to be improvised and trained after the war began.

Today is Army Day. Its purpose is to bring to our minds again the folly and the futility of unpreparedness. In the national capital, in the great cities, in our garrisoned possessions overseas, the lessons of preparedness are to be emphasized by ranks of marching men.

On this occasion, with a Roosevelt in the White House, himself participating in the patriotic demonstration at Washington, it is fitting that we recall the warning uttered by Theodore Roosevelt in 1915, almost on the eve of our war in Europe:

"I am, as you know, a most ardent believer in national preparedness as a means of securing that honorable and self-respecting peace which is the only peace desired by all high-spirited people. But it is an absolute impossibility to secure such preparedness in full and proper form if it is an isolated feature of our policy. The lamentable fate of Belgium has shown that no justice in legislation or success in business will be of the slightest avail if the nation has not prepared in advance the strength to protect its rights .... There must be social, economic and military preparedness all alike."

The words are still true. A progressive, united nation must have and maintain an adequate army and navy.

Farm Relief: Ruth Bryan Owen

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Michigan, leading all other states in electing delegates to the convention that is to ratify or reject the amendment repealing the Eighteenth, again shows the drift of public sentiment on national prohibition. The vote is overwhelmingly for repeal, something like three to one.

The indications are that the vote in the convention in favor of repeal will be about that proportion. The convention is to meet on April 10 to give Michigan the opportunity to be the first of the 48 states to go on record for a return to the traditional American concept of the function of the Constitution.

Michigan has become iconoclastic and has smashed precedents and records within the last few months. When it cast its vote for Roosevelt it went to the Democrats in a Presidential campaign for the first time since Franklin Pierce was elected in 1852; now it leads the states in voting for repeal.

With the possible exception of three states, all that will hold conventions this year are certain to follow in the wake of Michigan. Incredible as it may seem, Pennsylvania is one of the three in doubt. And more than half the states will act in 1933.

With everything favorable to repeal, there is all the more reason that in determining the regulation and control of the sale of beer pains should be taken to do nothing to change public sentiment through disgust.

Manufacture of Beer Will Help the Farmers

The manufacture of beer will help the farmers by creating a market for grain that otherwise would be unsold or sold as usual at a loss.

The Administration's measure for the refinancing of farm mortgages will help them more. In a characteristically short, clear message the President explains the purpose of the bill. It is proposed to make it possible for the farmers to meet their indebtedness and hold their farms. He says:

"The Federal Government should provide for the refinancing of mortgage and other indebtedness so as to accomplish a more equitable readjustment of the principal of the debt, a reduction of interest rates, which in many instances are so unconscionably high as to be contrary to sound public policy, and by a temporary readjustment of amortization, to give sufficient time to farmers to restore to them the hope of ultimate free ownership of their own land."

Debts contracted by farmers at a time when the prices for their crops had a much greater money value than today cannot possibly be met. The creditors know it as well as the debtors. The creditors no more want the land on which the mortgage rests than the debtors want to give it up. It is to the interest of the nation that the farmers be kept upon their land.

Woman to Get Diplomatic Post

The Administration is according greater recognition to women in the governmental sphere than they ever had before. Miss Perkins—first woman of the Cabinet, promises to be one of the most efficient and constructive forces in the Administration. Now it is understood that, for the first time in our history, a woman is to be given a diplomatic post. Within a few days we probably shall have the announcement that Ruth Bryan Owen is to be Minister to Denmark. We predict that it will prove a happy choice.

The qualities of her distinguished father have passed to the daughter. She has the charm, the democratic simplicity and naturalness, the liking for folks and much of the eloquence of her sire. Within the last six weeks New York City has discovered Mrs. Owen.

* * *

Ruth Bryan Owen Always Womanly

At the dinner given Mrs. Roosevelt, she was one of the speakers. There was such warmth and color, and feeling and whimsical humor in what she said, and she said it with such consummate art, that when she closed she was given the only ovation of the evening In voice and expression she was perfect. Some women speakers have thin, high voices that do not appeal on the platform; some try to be as masculine as possible in what they say and in how they say it. The voice of Mrs. Owen is rich, her modulation is conversational, her eloquence is not in noise but in the turn of phrase, and always she is womanly.

A few days later she acted as toastmaster at a dinner in New York—something rare in the experience of New Yorkers. Again she said the right things in just the right way and with a pleasing humor, and it was the common comment of professional banquet diners that they never had seen a toastmaster do a better job. Postmaster General Farley thus testified publicly at a Washington dinner a little later.

The qualities that explain her triumphs on these occasions explain her personal popularity as a member of the House of Representatives on both sides of the middle aisle. She is a fine human being—and the world really is not congested with real human beings. Incidentally she is modest. Though there were few members of the House capable of speaking with such an art as her she seldom spoke.

Bryan's Claim To Fame

The post in Denmark may make a sentimental appeal to her because it comes under the State Department of which her father was the head. Obsessed by a passion for peace, he set himself to what seemed the impossible task of negotiating treaties with all the nations of the world, providing for the submission of disputes that had failed of diplomatic settlement to an international commission and binding the nations not to go to war within a year while the commission's work was being done. Many nations signed. Some did not. The plan was based on the perfectly sound idea that if nations can be held off from war for as much as a year the probability of armed conflict can be reduced to a minimum.

Most wars, like street brawls, come from hot blood; give the blood time to cool and common sense resumes its sway. It is not an easy matter to keep the war spirit of a people boiling for a year. And in the meantime other nations have the opportunity to mediate.

Those treaties are Bryan's claim to fame as Secretary of State.

They did not work when the World War came, but nothing else would have worked at that time.

He has another claim to recognition in the State Department. He took a stand against "dollar diplomacy" or "dollar imperialism," and sought to regain the confidence of the Latin-American republics. Thus on assuming office he received the Latin-American diplomats first. They had confidence in him in South America.

The story is told that on one occasion when a critical matter was pending the representative of a certain nation, unable to reach an agreement with Bryan, took up his hat and turned to leave.

"Then I am to understand this is final?" he asked.

"Nothing is final between friends," said Bryan with a smile.

Some people do not think he was "strong" as Secretary of State. He was very strong for peace.

Just before becoming head of the Cabinet, Bryan had made a tour of South America, speaking in all the capitals, and making a fine impression. Mrs. Owen recently visited Denmark and made a fine impression there. If she goes to Denmark she will be among friends, in a friendly land.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 8.—Almost anybody, I suppose, can crack open a soft-boiled egg. Just a tap across the midriff with an ordinary table knife, and voila! But I'm different. Since I don't know when, I've been the uncrackingest soft-boiled eggist that ever crawled out of the cockle-burrs.

I've cracked soft-boiled eggs in many parts of the world. (Be a newspaperman and lead a life of adventure!) Yet, to this very day, indeed to this very morning, when I reach out to pick up an egg, I steel myself for the worst, and murmur: "What lies ahead, Heaven only knows!"

I know that everybody makes some excuse to get out of the room. The hired man yanks down the curtains, and the dogs scoot under the bed. The minute the eggs are brought on, I seem to be in a thin way. Everybody begins blessing themselves and looking about for cyclone cellars.

They have been through it many times. They know nobody can have a filthier time with an egg than I. But no egg yet has licked me, and I intend to go down fighting. We of Harvard are like that. An egg begins to get alecky, the second I take hold. You can hear it sneer yanh, yanh, yanh.

* * *

Well, here goes! Just a second, while I run through the headlines. The Japs have taken another some-place-or-other. I dare them to come take this egg. Nice egg. Papa is going to bust you wide open, sprinkle your innards with salt and pepper and oopsie-daisey. Your Papa needs nourishment. Look at his sunken cheeks and the way his pajamas fit. You could throw a leopard through that collar space in the back.

* * *

Now eggie peggie—tap, tap, tap! Don't wince. It isn't going to hurt. It will soon be over. In fact, it is over. All over my wrist. A blob of yellow and a smear of white. I'll act indifferent. After all, I'm on a much higher plane than an egg. A second, while I put the other half down. That'll save it, at least. It will, will it? Well, there it goes into the right cuff of my pajama pants. What was it Shakespeare said about: "Thy cuff conceals, etc?" See, even I can't crack eggs, I can crack jokes. Encourage me, for Pete's sake, with a prop laugh or something. I hardly know what I'm doing. Look how I'm twisting my neck in quick jerks.

* * *

I'd better pry some of this loose egg off before it congeals. I must be calm. Let me think! There, scratching my head to think, I got a mess of it in my hair. With all my troubles, I'm grateful for one thing. This egg is new. Bless the hen, bless the candler, bless the farmer, bless the middleman. That's just like me. Sitting here, thinking of the good in other people, when I'm up to my armpits in egg. Was there ever such a patriot!

* * *

Never noticed those dribbles on my pajama coat. I' ll rub them off with my elbows. Might as well gum up my elbows, the only parts of me not smeared except that one little spot behind my left ear. Don't think for a minute, though, that, with things breaking against me the way they are, I'll give up eggs. I'm not spineless. I don't want to be babied. I'll meet any egg you bring, catch-as-catch-can, any time. Ring Finnegan's bell.

* * *

Now, I seem sticking to something. I might have known. You know, when I stood up to reach down in my cuff, well, some of the egg got in the chair and I plopped down in it. I suppose I'll be walking around town now, dragging a chair. A good ad for the Grand Rapids furniture people: "Columnist sticks to our chairs!"

* * *

If anybody around this house had my best interests at heart, they wouldn't shove a couple of eggs at me and walk out. They'd stick around. See how I'm sticking. As it is, gaze at me. No, don't look now, wait until I tidy up a bit. Did you ever see anyone look so forlorn? Notice around my temples. That used to be all filled out.

* * *

What business has one as feeble as I trying to crack even a humming bird's egg before I have anything to eat? I should have had a massage and a hooker of brandy. I'm too wan to kill a sick mosquito with a meat axe. No wonder eggs take advantage and get me down.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

I'm fifty years, this month.
What does one want,
What does one feel,
When there's so little time
To go?

I don't fear Death.
Death, at the worst,
Is only lacking sleep;
And, at the best,
May mean another chance
And so
It's not the thought
Of dying that I dread,
But that far greater risk
Of losing Life
While yet I live!

"How can that be?" you say
"If one is living,
"How can one lose life?"

So easily!
For Life is more
Than just existence.
Life is not measured
By its span of years;
By things one has or does.
Life is a thing that happens
In a man's own soul.
It is that soul's reaction
To experience,
And is as tall,
Or trivial,
As the man himself.

A man may breathe
Through three score years and ten,
May work and play,
Eat, sleep,
Make love and mate,
Go places,
Gather riches,
Fame and power,
Yet never really know
What living means;
And "lose his Life,"
As sure as if
He'd died at birth.

To me,
That's worse than death.
I'd rather spend
My days in agony
And learn, at least,
How people feel in pain,
Than drowse
Through stupid years
Like some contented cow.

I WANT TO LIVE!
LIVE ALL THE LIFE THERE IS!
HEAR ALL THE SONGS,
TASTE ALL THE HIDDEN TEARS, AND SET MY FEET
ON EVERY SECRET TRAIL!

And yet, I know
It all depends on me,
How much I live,
Or if I live at all.

FOR THIS
I LONG SINCE LEARNED—A MAN MAY HAVE
AS MUCH OF LIFE
AS HE DARE TAKE;

BUT FOR EACH THING HE TAKES
THERE IS A PRICE!

Not punishment,
Or penalty;
Just price—
The price of Growth.
Growth costs.
It spoils our comfort,
Hurts our laziness
And makes us risk
The danger of a change;
And change seems dreadful
To our timid souls,
So dreadful that, at times,
We'd rather die
Than change.
And so we die,
Though still we seem
To live!

FATE DOES NOT STINT OUR LIVES.
WE STINT OUR LIVES, OURSELVES,
BECAUSE WE GRUDGE THE PRICE.
SO I MAY HAVE
AS MUCH OF LIFE
AS I DARE TAKE;
BUT, DO I CARE ENOUGH
FOR LIFE
TO PAY THAT PRICE?

I DO!
Oh, yes; I know
I'll whine
When payment's due,
For I'm that way.
I'll lie, and cheat,
And try to duck the bill;
But, for this second,
While I still am brave,
This is my will—

I WANT TO LIVE!
LIVE ALL THE LIFE THERE IS,
NO MATTER WHAT IT COSTS!
AND SO,
IF THERE'S A GOD
WHO CAN HEAR PRAYERS
LIKE MINE,
I HOPE
HE LETS ME HAVE THE WORKS
BEFORE I GO

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

It may be necessary for some of your relatives to live in your home. They would be supporting themselves if such a thing were possible. If they had any other place to go they would not have asked to join your family circle.

It is unkind to make remarks to empasize such a situation.

Because these persons do not belong to your family, should not make any difference in your treatment of them.

Remember that you are in greater luck if you have not had to ask aid.

The world is full of people and one or another before the end of life must ask favors of someone, so be gentle and generous as you can.

The fact that you have been able to keep your own head above water should make you so thankful that you would esteem it a privilege to share with others as circumstances suggest.

Make it as easy and comfortable as you can for those who use your home as a place to sleep and eat.

And the person seeking such help should try in every way not to disturb the routine of your home life or its privacy.
